PHILADELPHIA CHEERS

LINDBERGH EN ROUTE

Whistles and Bells Speed Flyer on Way to New York From Capital.

By the Associated Press.
PHILADELPHIA, June 13.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh flew over Philadelphia shortly after 11 a. m. today. Philadelphia cheered, blew whistles and rang bells, but nobody on the ground knew whether the ace of the Atlantic was in the first or the second flight that flew high across the lower part of the city and followed the Delaware River north.

Twenty-three planes were counted in the first group that passed over at 11:05 a. m. Twelve minutes later a second flight of five planes appeared and soon was lost to sight. They passed over Trenton, N. J., at 11:18 a. m. Probably never in the history of Philadelphia were so many persons on the roofs of high buildings as there were today, watching for the "Lone Eagle." When the first group of planes disappeared the crowd left the roofs and missed the second flight.

Lindbergh had passed over Wilmington, Del., approximately the half-way mark, at 10:50.

Curious," he said to Capt. McClelland. He added a flyer should not use the plane until that was done. "But your life we will, Colonel," shouted Capt. McClelland, as the amphibian shot down the course. The auxiliary tank's capacity is about 300 miles, and the distance from Washington to Mitchell Field is 238.

Street Covered With Paper.
Street cleaning department officials said tonight that so much paper had been scattered by the crowds that it would take a full week to get the streets cleaned up as they were before Lindbergh's arrival. Most of the debris was paper—licker tape, bits of newspapers and just any old kind of paper that could be torn up and thrown out of windows or from roofs. There were tons of vari-colored confetti, too. Hours after it had been cast to the winds, some of the paper continued to drift around in the air. The streets already were littered with it, and the wind piled it in drifts like snow.

CONVICT KILLED, TWO CAUGHT, ONE MAKES ESCAPE IN JOLIET JAILBREAK

Fight in Stockade Follows Attempt of Five Condemned Men to Gain Their Freedom.

PRISONER SLAIN BY JAILER'S SHOT

Captured Pair Had Made Several Previous Efforts to Flee After Killing Warden Klein.

By the Associated Press.
JOLIET, Ill., June 13.—In a fight with guards in the county jail yard at noon today two of five condemned convicts who escaped from their cells were shot, one fatally. Two others were recaptured and one, Charles Shader, escaped.

The five convicts, who were sentenced to hang for the murder of Deputy Warden Peter N. Klein, during an escape from the new State prison a year ago, appeared in the stockade which surrounds the newly erected gallows on which they are scheduled to die, and the alarm was sounded.

Police of the city and Deputy Sheriffs surrounded the yard and a pistol fight ensued.

As the fight developed a noon-day crowd was attracted. As the men were subdued, the crowds took up the cry of "hang them." Police were forced to use loaded weapons to threaten the crowds before the hundreds of persons retreated.

Break Made at Noon.
The break came as the men were being fed at noon in their compartment in the southwest wing of the jail. Evan Isaacs, a keeper, had handed food to Charles Duschowski. Instead of taking the tin Duschowski threw his arm around Isaacs' neck and overpowered him.

Walter Stalesky and Roberto Torres seized Jailer William Hinkle and quickly overpowered him. Then the five convicts ran to the office of the jail on the first floor and seized several revolvers.

Going down the passageway which leads from the rear of the jail to the stockade which surrounds the gallows, the convicts were to be executed, the quintet met Sheriff Markgraf coming from the house.

They pointed their revolvers at Markgraf and ordered him to put up his hands. The Sheriff complied and the convicts then started to push him toward his sedan, parked inside the stockade.

Mrs. Markgraf, looking from a window of the Sheriff's residence, saw what was occurring. Screaming, she ran into the stockade. She attempted to push the convicts away from her husband and they thrust her aside. She then fainted.

Force Sheriff to Drive.
The convicts made the Sheriff take the driver's seat in the car. Stalesky, revolver in hand, took a seat beside him. He put the gun against the Sheriff's ribs and ordered him to drive from the stockade.

As the car started, guards on duty at the front of the jail came running to the entrance to the stockade and immediately opened fire. Stalesky slumped, seriously wounded as the first bullets ripped through the car. At the same time another group of guards came through the passageway door and began firing. Thus the Sheriff was between two lines of fire.

"Don't shoot," he shouted as a bullet went through his hat.

The convicts then leaped from the machine and retreated into a corner.

Jailer Leo Lamb, leaning from a window in the Sheriff's residence, shot down Gregorio Rizzo, the bullet going through his head. He died shortly before 3 o'clock. Wounded, another Mexican, was returned.

Guards Charge Stockade.
The special guards, augmented by regular prison guards, Capt. McCrany and a squad of police, State Patrolman James O'Neill and others, charged into the stockade and quickly overpowered the quartet. Shader disappeared during the hand-to-hand fighting in the stockade.

Duschowski, known as the worst of the "bad men" than was known, was severely wounded before he was overpowered. The men were trussed up and carried into the jail.

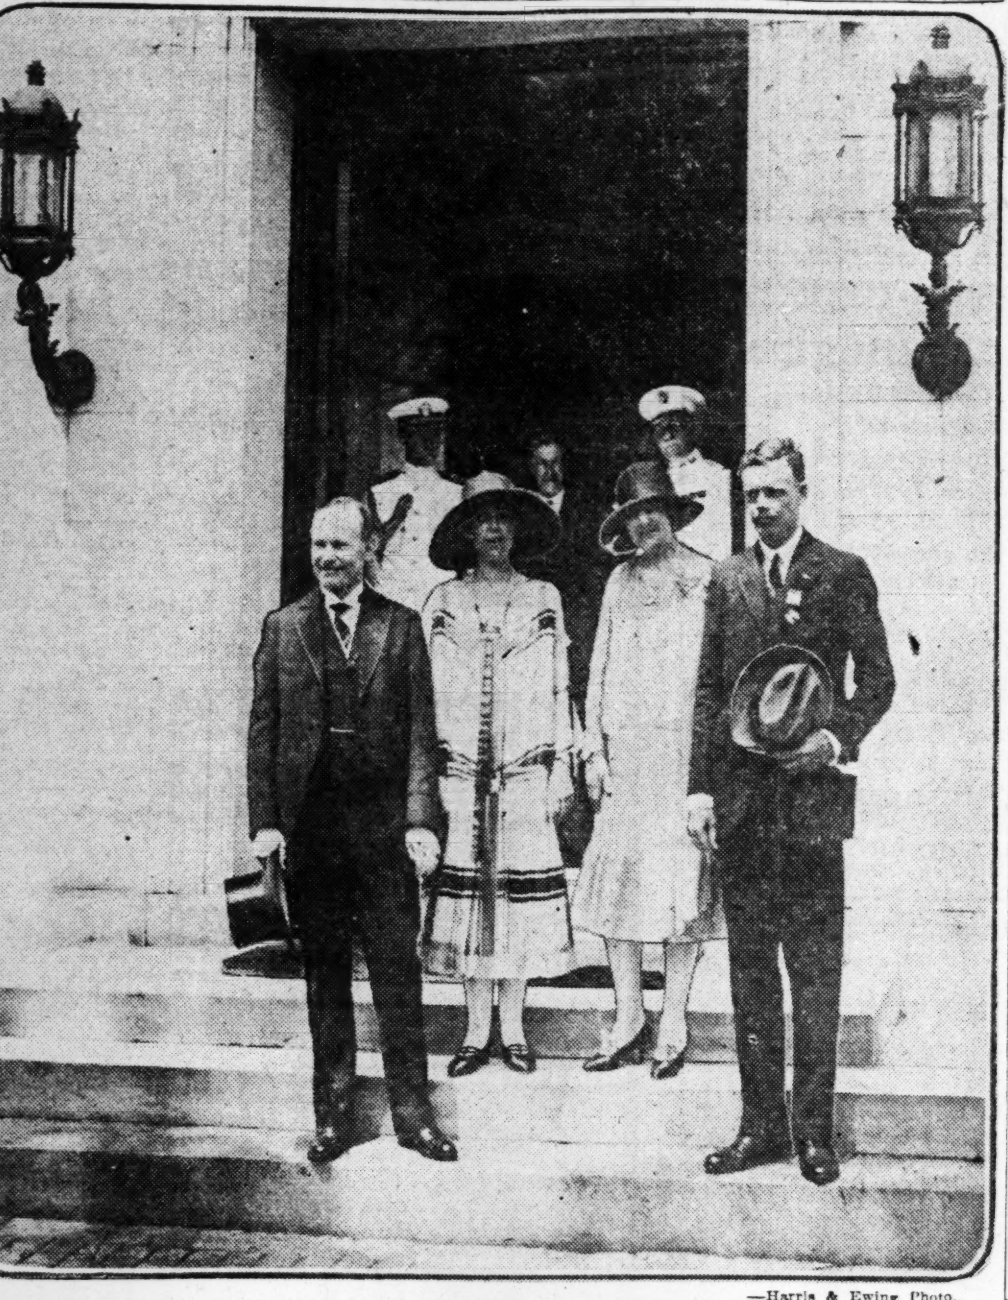

Before the convicts could be taken into the jail, they were taken to the stockade and attempted to take Duschowski from the guards.

The guards formed a cordon around the convicts and ordered the crowd to keep back.

A bullet entered Stalesky's back between the shoulder blades. He is in a critical condition.

After Rizzo, Stalesky and Duschowski were taken into the jail, a search began for Shader. At first it was believed he was hidden ing on the roof of the jail and the fire department was summoned. A ladder was placed against the building and Justice of the Peace George Obstnik and Deputy Sheriff Leonard Brockman climbed to the top. They searched without success. Later it was said Shader was seen running north on the track elevation, following the Alton tracks. Posses were sent in all directions.

heard made by the other gangsters, when they returned to Birger's cabin after Birger had shot Price through the body, but before Price was finally dispatched with Birger's machine gun. In telling of the shooting of Price, Newman professed to relate an eyewitness story.

Rains Caused Cave-in.
Since the mid-January tragedy, heavy rains had caused tons of earth to cave in upon the shaft, which is 10x18 feet. The casing begins 20 feet below the surface, and the unprotected and soggy dirt was still falling in as the excavators worked.

Until today, no machinery was at hand, and miners, working in relays, removed the thick mud in primitive fashion with shovels and buckets, the latter passed from hand to hand. Seven or eight men did the digging, and nearly 100 were in the bucket line. A windlass was placed in use last night, and today a clamshell digging apparatus, lent by the C. & E. I. Railroad, was used.

Sightseers Flock to Scene.
A continuous procession of automobiles passed along Highway 37 yesterday, driving as slowly as highway police would permit, and their cars along the roadway, two to three miles beyond, and walked back to a line 200 feet from the shaft, only the workers and county officials were permitted to pass.

Hundreds of the spectators remained until after dark, when all that could be seen was a line of miners with carbide lamps on their caps, twinkling like fireflies as they kept the buckets of refuse moving from hand to hand.

The work was done almost in silence. In a routine which required few commands. About 300 miners were on hand, and shifts were changed every half-hour, one of the men working at a time. Every change of shifts required a fresh group of men to slide down the sticky sides into the hunched portion of the shaft. The dirt wall continued to crumble into the excavation while the work was in progress.

Two Workers Injured.
Two men were hit by a boom pole that fell at 4 a. m. today at the mine site. Roy Norman of Johnston City, a coal miner, was treated at the Herin Hospital for bruises about the head and a lacerated lip. Louis Allen of Marion was taken to the Marion Hospital with a deep gash in his head.

ROBBER WOUNDED 3 TIMES IN HOME OF POLICEMAN

Motorcycle Patrolman, Aroused From Sleep, Pursues and Captures Negro After Desperate Fight.

A Negro burglar, discovered early today in the home of Motorcycle Policeman Fred L. Beckmann at 3541A Caroline street, was shot three times by Beckmann and then beaten over the head with the policeman's emptied revolver before he was subdued, as he tried to escape. The Negro is in a serious condition at City Hospital No. 2.

Beckmann, awakened by his wife when she saw a form moving noiselessly about their room, reached under his pillow, pulled out his revolver and called: "Who are you? This is a police officer whose home you're in."

Negro Fights Pursues.
Springing from beneath the foot of the bed, the Negro ran to the stairs. Beckmann followed, firing four times at the fleeing form. The Negro ran out the rear door and was going over the alley fence when Beckmann fired two more shots. Beckmann ran out the gate and saw the Negro drop.

As if sensing that Beckmann's revolver had been emptied by the six shots, the Negro jumped up and grappled with the policeman as Beckmann reached his side. During the struggle, the policeman worked his right hand, holding the revolver, free from the Negro's clutch. He beat the burglar over the head, breaking the handle of the revolver. Finally the Negro was subdued.

Beckmann's wife, seeing the struggle, meanwhile had telephoned police of the Magnolia Avenue Station. As they arrived Beckmann was leading his prisoner to a call box.

Suspected of Other Burglaries.
At the hospital, the Negro was found to be suffering from bullet wounds in the right shoulder, right hand and left foot, in addition to lacerations on his head where he had been beaten. He gave his name as Ray Williams, 3406 Walnut street.

In his room at the Walnut street address, police found jewelry valued by them at $500, believed to have been stolen. There were several watches and scarf pins and a held, as which are the initials "B. L. E." When the Negro's condition permits, he will be questioned concerning a number of burglaries committed recently in St. Louis by an early morning prowler.

Held as evidence against the Negro are two purses and a watch and chain, which Policeman Beckmann said had been taken from his home.

DR. JOSEPH C. PEDEN SUE FOR DIVORCE AND ALIMONY

Wife's Petition Alleges Physician Deserted Family in 1925 and Ignored Pleas to Return.

A suit for divorce and alimony was filed at Clayton today against Dr. Joseph C. Peden, a physician, with offices in the Missouri Theater Building, by Mrs. Laura Peden of 7137 Westmoreland drive, University City.

The petition states that Mrs. Peden and her husband were married Dec. 8, 1917, and lived together until Dec. 22, 1925, when Dr. Peden is alleged to have deserted his wife and two children. He has absented himself since, the petition that he return home.

Dr. Peden is the owner of property of value and has a large cash deposit in the bank, according to Mrs. Peden, who is seeking support for herself and the children, Joseph Jr., 8 years old, and Burnett, 6.

Call to Decorate St. Louis In Gala Dress to Greet Homecoming Lindbergh

Committee Urges Business Houses to Hang Flags, Bunting and Pictures and Let Colors Flutter on Line of Parade.

An appeal to St. Louis to don its most festive dress in honor of the Lindbergh welcome ceremonies next Friday, Saturday and Sunday was issued today by Maurice Wright, chairman of the decorations section of the Lindbergh Reception Committee.

Wright particularly asked that business buildings along the route of the Saturday parade be decked in bunting, flags and pictures of the flyer, and added a request that St. Louisans in all parts of the city place flags and bunting on their homes and business buildings.

The committee itself is to decorate the downtown route of the parade, which includes Washington avenue from Twentieth to Fourth streets, Fourth from Washington to Olive, Olive from Fourth to Twelfth, and Twelfth from Pine to Locust. The decorations to be hung from United Railways span wires, include the national colors and streamers of royal purple.

It was announced yesterday at Washington that Lindbergh probably would follow his original schedule which calls for his arrival at Lambert-St. Louis Field at 4 p. m. Friday. If he does he will be able to see that the city is in holiday dress as he passes over it on the way to the flying field.

The announcement of the afternoon arrival was welcome news for tens of thousands of St. Louisans who had looked forward to seeing Lindbergh swoop down on the Naval Reserve base on the Mississippi as he reaches St. Louis, circle the downtown section and then swing out over Olive street and Lindell boulevard to the flying field.

Sale of Banquet Tickets.
Tickets for the Lindbergh banquet at Hotel Chase Saturday night were on sale to donors to the welcome fund between 9:30 a. m. and

U. S. JURY TO INVESTIGATE AFFAIRS OF INDIAN HEIRESS

Maud Lee Mudd Wilson's Two Marriages and Reported Kidnappings to Be Sifted.

By the Associated Press.
JOPLIN, Mo., June 13.—The troubles of Maud Lee Mudd Wilson, 18-year-old Indian heiress, whose estate has been tied up in litigation several years, will be investigated by a Federal grand jury sworn in at the opening of the grand term of United States District Court, William L. Vandeventer, Assistant United States District Attorney, announced.

Vandeventer said the inquiry was not concerning the Indian girl's estate, estimated variously from $500,000 to $3,000,000, but will be to ascertain whether any Federal laws have been violated in the care and treatment of the young heiress, who twice has been married in the last two years and several times had traveled half way across the country and several times had been reported kidnapped.

Maud Lee, her stepfather, Levi Bombery, and a special detective, Roy Martin, were in Federal Court today in response to subpoenas issued for them last week. They were to appear before the grand jury this afternoon. Maud Lee was accompanied by her second husband, Joe Wilson, with whom she has been residing in Arizona the last year.

Vandeventer said the girl is to be questioned along the lines of any violations of Indian laws or the white slave act.

Arrested 10 days ago following a row at a home of her mother and stepfather here upon her return with her new husband for a visit, Maud Lee was quoted as having said she loves her husband and desires to remain with him, and that she was forced into her first marriage to E. E. Gordon of Miami.

The marriage was annulled, but Gordon is seeking to have the annulment set aside.

X-RAY TECHNICIAN DIES SUDDENLY AT MACHINE

Assistant of Dr. Ernst Faltl Dead While Preparing to Photograph Patient.

Mrs. Wolfgang Schlueter, 29 years old, an X-ray technician, fell dead today in the office of Dr. Edwin C. Ernst in the Humboldt Building while she was preparing an X-ray machine for a photograph of a patient.

Mrs. G. C. Porter of 4931 Laclede avenue, a patient of Dr. Ernst, was in the room at 10:15 a. m. when Mrs. Schlueter died. She said the technician came from an adjoining room and apparently was preparing the apparatus in the room where Mrs. Porter was waiting, when she fell to the floor.

Dr. Ernst, who lives at 231 Westgate avenue, administered restorative measures at once without effect. Death apparently was instantaneous. There were two slight burns on Mrs. Schlueter's left hand, but an autopsy will be necessary to determine the cause of death. Dr. Ernst said she was subject to fainting spells and expressed doubt that the current in the X-ray apparatus was heavy enough to cause death.

Mrs. Schlueter was the wife of a fur dealer and lived with him at 4067A Shaw avenue. She had come to this country from Germany five years ago and had been in Dr. Ernst's employ for four years.

SPECIAL SESSION UNLIKELY

Speaker Longworth Discusses Subject of Convening Congress.

CINCINNATI, June 13.—Speaker Nicholas Longworth, of the national House of Representatives, does not believe it likely there will be a special session of Congress "unless something unforeseen should happen." Speaker Longworth made the statement today.

"The United States engineers who are at work on plans for flood prevention in the Mississippi Valley," he said, "will hardly be able to report before the regular meeting of Congress in December. The Appropriations Committee, which will probably present a bill appropriating funds for the relief of flood sufferers, and the Ways and Means Committee which will submit a revenue bill, have both been organized and will meet probably in the middle of October and will be ready to report immediately upon the assembling of the regular session of Congress." Longworth said he discussed the subject of a special session with President Coolidge before he left Washington.

Missing Man Found Murdered

LOUISVILLE Ky., June 13.—The body of William Partin, who had been missing since March 28, was found today behind a log at the foot of Great Cliff, on Pine Mountain. Partin had been shot five times. His hands and feet had been tied and a wire bound around a the body. John Partin, a brother, found the body after searching for more than two months, following William's disappearance from his home near Chenoa, 10 miles from here. County officials think moonshiners mistook Partin for a revenue officer.

FLIGHT CLIMAX OF 20 YEARS' WORK LINDBERGH SAYS

Flyer Pays Tribute to Air Pioneers Who Made Possible the Flight He Achieved.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—In the presence of a throng that spread out on the west lawn of the Capitol, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was presented yesterday with the Cross of Honor of the United States Flag Association by Charles Evans Hughes, senior founder of the association. The presentation was made at flag vesper service, and it is estimated that 20,000 persons were present.

The service was the first of its kind ever held, and exemplified in the words of James A. Moss, director-general of the association, the "spirit of religious tolerance and good will which is symbolized by the flag of the United States."

The Cross of honor was awarded the conqueror of the Atlantic for conspicuous service to the flag through his achievement "that emphasized to the entire world the hopes, aspirations and destiny of the American people as symbolized by the flag of the United States."

In his presentation speech, to which Lindbergh made a brief reply, Hughes said the youthful aviator incarnated the "spirit of America as intent on the purposes of peace."

Messenger of Good Will.
"In your flight to Europe," he said, "you became our most successful messenger of good will. There was healing in your wings."

"How could all that our flag represents," he continued, "be better exemplified than in your youth, your courage, your indomitable will, your skill, your devotion to the interests of peaceful intercourse between the nations?"

Cheers and waving of hats and handkerchiefs greeted the words of the former Secretary of State as he turned to the hatless youth, who sat beside Col. Moss across a

LINDBERGH GIVES WARNING ABOUT PACIFIC FLIGHT

Says Airmen Who Go To Hawaii Should Not Adopt Navigating Method He Used in Crossing Atlantic.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—Shortly before the take off for New York this morning Col. Charles A. Lindbergh received Washington's farewell tribute at a breakfast in his honor given by the National Aeronautic Association at the Mayflower Hotel.

Lindbergh left the temporary White House at Dupont Circle for the hotel at 6:25 a. m. in the automobile of John Hays Hammond, chairman of the Washington Reception Committee.

He was accompanied by the assistant secretaries in charge of aviation in the War, Commerce and Navy Departments. At the hotel he was met by Maj. Gen. Patrick, chief of the Army Air Service, and Rear Admiral Moffett, Naval Air Chief.

A San Francisco-to-Hawaii flight is practical and will be made in a short time, Col. Lindbergh said in an address at the breakfast. But he warned that the use of accurate navigation methods was highly important.

He expressed the hope that the small aisle from his mother and said:

"You flew the 'Spirit of St. Louis,' a fitting emblem of enterprise, but in your flight you happily incarnated the spirit of America herself."

What Made Flight Possible.
"In relation to this flight there are a few things that need consideration a little more than has already been done; that is, what made the flight possible."

"It was not the act of a single pilot," he added as the crowd cheered. "It was the culmination of over 20 years of aeronautical research and the gathering together of the best products of American aviation. The plane represented many American industries and represented only American industries."

"In addition to this, countless search activities should be taken into consideration; not alone the pilot who flew the plane across."

Crowds swarming the plaza east of the Capitol cheered Lindbergh to the echo as he passed, with his mother, from the White House automobile up the east steps of the building, through the library of the Supreme Court and down to the platform on a landing on the west steps.

Children Greet Him.
"What's the matter with Lindy—he's all right!" rang from thousands of school children banded on the steps on either side of the platform as he descended the steps to his assigned place. There was evidence of a strain on his face from the continuous round of celebrations in his honor.

A thousand school children sang vesper hymns as several hundred others, dressed in red, white and blue, formed flags on the steps back of the reception platform.

Following the invocation by the Right Rev. C. F. Thomas, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, and the call "to the colors," by red-coated buglers of Costello Post of the American Legion, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant Attorney-General, held the assemblage in a pledge of allegiance to the flag.

Sousa Leads Band.
John Philip Sousa, former leader of the Marine Band, led the famous musical organization in a rendition of his own march, "The Stars and Stripes Forever," while another former leader, Capt. William H. Santelmann, held the baton for "Our Glorious Banner."

Hymns by the audience and speeches on the history of the flag brought the service to a close, half an hour after Col. Lindbergh had been whisked away to the temporary White House.

U. S. AIRMEN OUTFLY BIRDS
Lindbergh and Chamberlin Surpass Distance of Plover.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Birdmen have surpassed the nonstop flight distance of birds, says Dr. Lee S. Crandall, curator of birds at the Bronx Zoo.

The factory-made wings that carried Col. Lindbergh 2519 miles to Paris and Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine 2995 miles to Germany, permitted man to eclipse the flights of Alaskan plovers, holders of the nonstop flight record among the feathered species. The longest flight of plovers have been from the Aleutian Islands to Hawaii, a distance of about 2400 miles, Dr. Crandall asserted.

BIGGEST AIRSHIP BEING BUILT
LONDON, June 13.—Two British airships, twice as big as any that ever have flown, will have trial tests early next year.

They are to carry 100 passengers each and are under construction at Cardington Royal Airships Works and the plant of the Airship Guarantee Co., at Howden, Yorkshire.

FIVE MEN HOLD UP BANK
OILTON, Ok., June 13.—Five men walked into the Oilton State Bank shortly after it opened this morning, held up employees and escaped with an undetermined amount of loot.

One man was reported shot. The loot is understood to have been less than $1000. Oilton is about 25 miles south of Tulsa.

come for many years after careful scientific research.

"Whatever is done for aeronautics in the future," he concluded, "it should be on a firm, sound basis."

Gets Hubbard Medal.
At the breakfast Lindbergh received the final decoration of his Washington reception, when Commander Byrd presented him with the Hubbard medal of the National Geographic Society, awarded only to famous explorers.

The flyer also was awarded an honorary life membership in the Aeronautic Association by Porter Adams, its president. Adams, in presenting the membership, said only nine people had received it, including the Wright Brothers, Samuel P. Langley, Glenn Curtiss and Thomas Edison.

Several hundred flyers were present at the breakfast including many noted army, navy and air mail pilots.

Experiences of Life

To most of us, the thought of hidden treasure stirs up visions of adventure. Yet, strangely enough, the experiences of life itself furnish more real adventure than could ever be found in the search for buried treasure.

Every human heart is a storehouse of experience which, if revealed, would make the ordinary tale sound tame. Too often they remain in the soul's secret silence.

But, sometimes they do speak, and then we have an epic of true adventure and romance. Then we see how human beings really act in a crisis; how they battle with ignorance, folly and temptation, and either emerge victorious or go down to defeat.

True Story for July contains 16 thrilling narratives of this nature—now on all newsstands. Get your copy today!

MARY M'SWINEY LOSES HER SEAT IN DAIL AT POLLS

Ardent Sinn Fein Leader Goes to Defeat With Peter Hughes, Only Government Minister Beaten.

COALITION MINISTRY STILL A POSSIBILITY

On Returns to Date, President Cosgrave's Forces Trail De Valera's Party by One Seat.

By the Associated Press. DUBLIN, June 13.—Results in 108 out of a total of 152 constituencies, given out today, showed the Government party trailing by one seat Fianna Fail, the De Valera wing among the Republicans, in last Thursday's election for a new Dail Eireann.

The count was as follows: Fianna Fail, 33; Government, 32; Labor, 19; National League, 5; Farmers, 7; Independents, 3, and Sinn Fein, 3.

It was unsafe to predict that this proportion would hold when all the results are known, especially as there was nothing to indicate how the voting had gone in the far Eastern counties. Since De Valera's adherents made denunciation of the constitution based on the Anglo-Irish treaty creating the Free State a paramount question in their campaign, they face defeat on this point on the basis of the known results. All parties, except the Fianna Fail and the Sinn Fein, support the Government on the Constitution, notwithstanding differences on other questions.

Prospect of Coalition Considered. This fact, however, will not enable President Cosgrave to form a Government independent of the support of some other faction if the present ratio between the parties is maintained when the returns are complete. Thus the prospect of a coalition Government is still being considered. President Cosgrave and the other Ministers, however, declined publicly to discuss such a contingency at the moment.

Among the notable defeats in these elections is that of Mary MacSwiney, an ardent Sinn Fein leader. She is the sister of Terence MacSwiney, Lord Mayor of Cork, who died in jail after an extensive hunger strike during the disturbed period preceding organization of the Free State. The only Government minister defeated is Peter Hughes, who held the defense portfolio.

President Cosgrave, Vice President Kevin O'Higgins, James Burke, local Government Minister, and Desmond Fitzgerald, Minister of External Affairs, came through with little trouble. De Valera had a surplus of 8000 votes in his constituency in Clare.

Countess Markievicz Elected. In the list of successful Fianna Fail candidates is Countess Markievicz. She was the first woman ever elected to the British House of Commons, but never took the seat. She was sentenced to death for a part in the Dublin revolt in 1916, but the sentence was commuted and she subsequently was released.

Those elected in Dublin County include the prominent Republican leader Sean MacEntee and Tom Johnson, the Labor chief. It is thought that Johnson may lead a larger number of followers in the new dail than in the last parliament, as the Laborites elected a total of 16, as compared with 15 in the last dail, and many others think there will be several more.

Dan Breen of Tipperary, well known Republican extremist, was defeated.

Count George Plunkett, whose electoral victory in Roscommon during the war launched the Sinn Fein on a campaign which ended with its domination of the greater part of Ireland, was among those falling of election in the present contest.

Plunkett belongs to the extreme Republican party, which has lost heavily to the Fianna Fail party, the De Valera section.

Five Policemen and Several Demonstrators Injured During Attempt to Break Up Meeting. By the Associated Press. PARIS, June 12.—Twenty-one Communists were arrested at St. Etienne yesterday when they attempted to break up a meeting at which Andre Tardieu, Minister of Public Works, was the principal speaker. Five of the police and several of the manifestants were wounded.

The Government's decision expressed by Barthou last week to deal severely with Communism is reported to have been responsible for the outbreak. Elections are still a year off, but the Cabinet ministers already have begun a drive against Communism, making speeches in various parts of France with Communism as their text.

SCHOOL TEACHER ROBBED

BY VOLUNTEER GUIDE
Stranger Steals Suit Case After Offering to Direct Woman to Home of Friends.

Miss Mildred Wright, a school teacher of Marshfield, Mo., yesterday morning at the Union Station accepted the offer of a polite, elderly, bald-headed man to direct her to the home of friends who was seeking. A few hours later she reported to police that the stranger had stolen her suit case, containing clothes valued at $100.

The suit case was left in a cigar store at Grand boulevard and Olive street. After a bus ride the stranger, pleading he was confused in his directions, returned to the cigar store, ostensibly to ask the way to the address she was seeking, according to her story. When he failed to return she went into the cigar store to claim the suit case and found it was gone.

HOW LINDBERGH STORY SOUNDED ON THE RADIO

Announcers Groped for Words to Describe Vastness of New York Reception.

Veteran radio announcers gulped for breath and mixed adjectives ludicrously the loud speakers sounded full of New York boat whistles and a general bedlam on the radios in St. Louis today as New York's reception to Col. Lindbergh was broadcast by Station KSD (the Post-Dispatch).

Lindbergh was supposed to make a speech to the radio audience listening through nine large stations. But all radio fans here heard was a distant "Hello, New York," in a boyish voice and then Announcer Graham McNamee's proud comment: "That was Lindbergh."

McNamee was stationed at Pier A to cover Lindbergh's progress from the lower bay, where he had landed in an amphibian plane. Held the time this announcer, who reported the world series last fall, was searching for words with which to describe the immensity of the New York reception. The other half was taken up by whistles from Staten Island to the Bronx, all blowing at once and drowning out McNamee's voice.

Announcer All But Floored. When the steam tug Macon, which brought Lindbergh to Pier A, the southernmost pier on the Hudson, landed bedlam broke loose and McNamee's comment was "Oh, what a ball game!" There were stammered phrases which informed the radio fans that the Statue of Liberty was lifting her arm for Lindbergh; that in no other nation in the world and at no other time in history was there such demonstration; that the air was full of planes and the Hudson full of ships. McNamee plainly was bowled over by the scene.

Uptown, Announcer Phillips Carlin had a better time of it. He was stationed at a window on the fourth floor of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. Building, 195 Broadway. This vantage point commanded a view of the crowds on lower Broadway and the scene about the City Hall.

Jam on Broadway. When the microphone was switched to this station the noise did not interfere with the announcer's story. Carlin reported as follows:

"The biggest crowds I ever saw in this town—they're stretched along Broadway for miles. Down below the people are packed so thick you couldn't drop a dime without hitting someone. We're giving Lindbergh a WELCOME. The first stories of the buildings are packed with spectators. Boys are sitting on ledges and one has climbed a flag pole. The people are packed on the side streets... they're trying to break for Broadway... the police push them back... looks bad... somebody's going to get hurt before this is over... the police have clubs but they're not using them..."

Storm of Ticker Tape. "The crowds are jollier than those in Washington...listen. Here comes the old Seventh Regiment...hear the band...wait, I'll turn the mike... (the band blares forth)...everybody in New York has been saving ticker tape—they've dumped the first 400 tons of it already...usually they wait for the parade to come before throwing paper...down below there's a street cleaner...he's got three papers and there's a million in the street...there are some airplanes up above...the crowd is cheering a motor cycle cop—here comes a man down Broadway carrying a bundle...they're cheering him...now the firemen are getting out a hose...if these crowds ever break for the street the police won't be able to stop them...here's a bulge in the crowd already—they're taking a woman out...she has fainted...old people...kids, women with babies in arms...everybody is here today...I'll bet half the people in New York are strung out along this street from the Battery to the Park..."

At the City Hall. The din on Broadway increased in a vast wave of sound as Lindbergh approached the City Hall. There a third switch in the microphone was made to pick up the speech-making and applause from the platform. The crowd applauded riotously as Mayor Jimmy Walker welcomed Lindbergh and there was reference to how the son of one immigrant met the son of another immigrant.

Lindbergh, himself, was announced as a speaker, and this time his words were clearly heard. There was almost a hush as thousands waited to hear him.

"When I landed at Croydon Field in the British Isles," he remarked, "I saw 1300 of the pride of Scotland Yard swallowed up in the enormous crowd. My reception at Le Bourget, at Brussels and at Washington were marvelous. But I think that all four put together, here in New York, would be like those London bobbies."

This tickled the crowd and the microphone rang with "Huzzahs" and cries of "Attaboy, Lindy." Lindbergh then spoke briefly on aviation and without rhetorical flourish of any kind, ended his address with an abrupt "Thank you."

Anna Case sang "The Star-Spangled Banner," concluding the ceremony at City Hall.

JUDGE C. N. MILLER
DIES OF PARALYSIS

He Recently Began Fifth Term on Bench—Gov. Baker to Choose Successor.

Gov. Baker will appoint a successor to Judge Calvin N. Miller of the Court of Criminal Correction, who died last night at the age of 60, after a protracted illness, at his home, 5530 Clemens avenue. Arrangements for his funeral have not been completed.

Provisional Judge Frank B.
Grodzki, who has filled Judge Miller's bench since last autumn and intermittently previously, notified the Governor by telegraph of Judge Miller's death. Among those mentioned by politicians as possible appointees to the place are Republican City Committeeman Edward Butler, Alderman Krueger, a former incumbent in the court; Police Commissioner Arthur J.
Freund and Grodzki.

Judge Miller, who had been on this bench longer than any other man, since 1911, having begun his fifth four-year term a few months ago, suffered a paralytic stroke in May, 1924, and though he was able to hold court a good deal of the time thereafter, he suffered another stroke last October and from that time was confined to his home. Complications in his illness ensued. He was elected to his fifth term last November and managed to visit court Christmas eve long enough to be sworn in. He did not return.

He was born in Osceola, Ia., and was graduated from the St. Louis College of Law in 1893. Practicing at the old Four Courts, he made a wide acquaintance, and eventually entered politics.

There are two divisions of Court of Criminal Correction and Judge Miller sat in the oldest, No. 1. He and his colleagues in the other division divided the work, so that No. 1 always handled all misdemeanor cases coming from the Prosecuting Attorney's office, including charges of wife and child abandonment and other matters affecting marital relations. For his methods and manner of handling these cases, Judge Miller became popular with women's organizations. He frowned on men who failed in their obligations as husbands, but granted paroles to those who promised to care for their families.

Early in 1924 Judge Miller abruptly halted wholesale issuance to police of liquor search warrants, taking the position that neither suspicion, rumor nor anonymous communication, unsupported by reasonable evidence, justified a search. He expressed fear that innocent persons were suffering.
Where evidence was adequate and legally obtained, the Judge was zealous in upholding the State prohibition law, and once when a jury acquitted a defendant under it he discharged the whole panel of jurors declaring it was out of sympathy with prohibition.

Judge Miller sustained a demurrer to an indictment charging the late State Senator Frank H. Farris and Ray Cummins, then a policeman, with bribery, in connection with passage of the police salary bill by the 1917 Legislature, holding there could have been no bribery because the alleged offense occurred when the Legislature was not in session. The Judge's wholesale discharge of 96 Negroes arrested in the 1916 election caused discussion, but the arrests appeared to have been a matter of party controversy.

His widow, Mrs. Henrietta Brown
Miller, survives; also a daughter, Mrs. Frances Cook of Jackson
Heights, L. I.; and three sons, George of Long Beach Cal., and Carol and Theodore of St. Louis.

British Jury Awards Damages to Spectator Struck During Practice Swing.

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, June 12.—A jury's verdict has been returned here awarding $150 damages to a woman spectator accidentally struck by a golf club in the hands of a companion who was making a practice swing.

Miss Jennie C. Cleghorn of Forest Gate sued Miss C. A. Oldham of Windsor, Surrey. She had been struck on the jaw and rendered unconscious. She averred she herself had in no way been guilty of carelessness and that the defendant had been negligent.

"I have noticed that most people who play golf are not players at all, but are very fond of swinging the sticks, and all do not take the trouble to look behind them," commented Justice Rigby Swift.

QUAIL FLY IN AUTO, CAUSING

CRASH; TWO BOYS ARE KILLED

Third Youth Seriously Injured in Freak Accident on Road Near Greenville, O.

By the Associated Press.
GREENVILLE, O., June 12.—
Two quail flew in front of an automobile, struck the windshield and caused an accident near here which resulted in the death of two boys and the serious injury of a third. Walter Poe, 16 years old, and Joseph Strobel, 15, were killed and Harold Folkerth, 17, was seriously injured.

Folkerth, who was driving, became excited and lost control of the car when the two birds flew up from the side of the road. As the machine swerved to the side, one of the other boys caught at the steering wheel, causing the car to turn sharply and roll over.

RUM RUNNERS FLEE AFTER THEIR AUTO KILLS WOMAN

Leave Three Injured Unaided to Speed Away in Accomplices' Car With Cargo Near Detroit.

By the Associated Press.
DETROIT, Mich., June 12.—After crashing into an automobile and killing Mrs. Clyde W. Dunlop, 30 years old, and seriously injuring three other persons near here, occupants of a rum-running machine transferred their cargo to a third automobile, which had been following them, and sped away without offering assistance to the victims, according to police. Before police and an ambulance arrived at the scene, a fourth automobile containing accessory thieves drove up and the men stripped the wrecked machine and then drove away, ignoring the injured persons.

Frank Cicolas was arrested later in connection with the thefts.
Those injured were Clyde W.
Dunlop, Detroit business man, husband of the woman killed, and Mrs. Dunlop's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cook.

Injured Trying to Stop a Fight.

Martin Heffren, a retired merchant, suffered a fractured skull and ribs, and his wife, Lillian, and son, Martin Jr., were injured in the face and body in a general melee which followed efforts by Heffren to stop a fight between two unidentified men in front of the Heffren home, 1150 Baugh avenue, East St.
Louis, Saturday night. The men escaped in an automobile which had been parked at the curb.

DARNELL, 'MARRYING'
PARSON, ARRESTED

Former Minister Who Served Term Under Mann Act, Accused of Check Frauds.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, June 12.—Once famous as "the marrying parson," James Morrison Darnell, who was sentenced to Leavenworth penitentiary for violating the Mann act seven years ago, is under arrest today, charged with operating a confidence game.

The charge was filed by the Standard Oil Co., for whom he worked as an oil station attendant.
The company charges Darnell took its money, giving worthless checks to make his account balance.

First gaining public attention when he was expelled from the Baptist conference in 1908, Darnell next came into prominence because of his trial marriage with Ethel Spurgeon of Avon, Ill. He then married Ruth Soper in Hammond, Ind., after taking her there from Owatonna, Minn., for which he was convicted on a Mann act charge and sent to Leavenworth penitentiary. He also married bigamously another woman.
After his release from Leavenworth, Darnell married his fourth wife, Mildred Wood of Elgin, Ill.

CUCKOO REPRISAL LIKELY MOTIVE IN EAST SIDE KILLING

Michael J. Jones, Murdered, Had Deserted Gang and Sided With Italians in Moonshine Feud.

Police investigators believe the killing of Michael J. Jones, whose bullet-riddled body was found in East St. Louis early yesterday, may have been in reprisal for his desertion of the Cuckoo gang during its feud with Italian gunmen last year. Jones, known as "Mick," lived in the Cuckoo neighborhood around lower Chouteau avenue, and was active in Cuckoo forays. When the Cuckoos and Italian gangsters quarreled over the moonshining industry on the East Side, Jones suddenly broke with the Cuckoos.

One day he appeared with a revolver in each hand, at a Cuckoo rendezvous, near Fourteenth and Chestnut streets, and announced that anyone who harmed his friends on the East Side would do so over his dead body.

Met Mother Friday Night. Recently he returned to live in the old Cuckoo neighborhood. The feud had been settled for months, and doubtless he felt safe. Last Friday night he met his mother, Mrs. Anna Jones, 1912 Morrison avenue, by appointment. He told her he had obtained night employment at an East St. Louis dice game. That was the last time she saw him alive.

His body, with four bullet holes in the head, was found at 5 a. m. yesterday at 1709 North Ninth street, East St. Louis, by Timothy P. McCarthy, cafe proprietor, of 645 Collinsville avenue. McCarthy said he had driven past that point 19 minutes before and the body was not there. On the return trip McCarthy said two automobiles passed him—a Studebaker touring car occupied by three men, and a Chevrolet sedan.

Jones' body was bruised, as if thrown from an automobile. No one in the vicinity had heard shots. Jones' shoes were caked with dry gray mud. He was hatless and coatless and had 77 cents in his pockets.

He was indicted for the murder of John Mantowski, a taxicab chauffeur, in a Washington boulevard saloon in 1924, and was tried and acquitted on his self-defense plea. He was arrested for questioning, and subsequently released, in the killings of William D. Anderson in 1917 and Frank Morrissey in 1920.

FRENCH EDITOR SURRENDERS IN THREE-DAY SIEGE

Leon Daudet, Novelist's Son, Capitulates to Paris
Police and Starts Prison Term for Libel.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News, Copyright, 1927.
PARIS, June 13.—After three days of passive siege in his newspaper office, Leon Daudet, the French Royalist leader, surrendered to the police today and was taken to prison to serve a five months' sentence for libel.

This tragic-comic drama, which has occurred nowhere else in the world save Paris and throws a curious light on the French mentality. Leon, son of the famous writer, Alphonse Daudet, author of "Sapho," is noted as an almost pathological polemicist. He has been a deputy for many years and his incessant interruptions of other speakers added liveliness to an already lively governing body.

Daudet began his career as an anti-clerical when, after marrying a granddaughter of Victor Hugo, he was divorced and married his own cousin. He became a Catholic Royalist, which he has since remained. A year ago his son by his second marriage, Philippe, then 16 years old, was found shot dead in a taxicab. The police declared it a case of suicide. The newspapers published a series of anarchist poems found on the body of the boy.

Thought Father Crazy by Grief. Daudet, crazed by grief and chagrin, declared Philippe was a Royalist and had entered anarchist circles as a spy. He accused the police of assassinating his son and named the taxi chauffeur, Bajot, as an accomplice.

Bajot sued and Daudet was condemned by the court. Conservative opinion disapproved of the condemnation of a man "who was merely defending his son's memory," and the Government for months hesitated to order his arrest.

When two leading French communists were condemned to prison for treasonable activities, the Government decided to arrest Daudet simultaneously, thus holding a balance between the extreme right and extreme left. But conservative opinion considered this balancing of the patriotic, if erratic, Daudet against communists as unfair.

1290 Join Him in Defiance. On Friday, apprised that his arrest was imminent, Daudet went to the office of the Royalist newspaper, Action Francaise, with some 1200 of his followers, who, dressed in civilian attire and unrecognized, was struck down by a policeman and trampled. The police had to draw revolvers to prevent rescue by the crowd of five persons they had arrested.

During the riot, Daudet's defenders hurled chairs from the balcony. Police and Government officials then conferred and decided to end the affair.

Gendarmes and Firemen Called. While the 1200 weary defenders munched sandwiches and sipped wine, or dozed in the packed corridors of the building, large forces of gendarmes and firemen waited outside.

Daudet had written for today's papers an article in which he described himself as "the father of a family and a man of letters," thus playing strongly on the feelings of the French public. He said he had received tons of flowers for his son's grave and predicted civil war if the police tried to overcome his "resistance to iniquity."

"In the name of your son's blood," said the Chief, "I beg you not to cause the useless spilling of more French blood."
"You speak humanely," answered Daudet. "In my son's name I surrender."

After Daudet was whisked away in the Chief's car, the 1200 gaunt, red-eyed partisans filed into the street and went home, to bed.

Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin to New Post. By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, June 13.—Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin of Tucson, Ariz., today was elected president of George Washington University to succeed William Mather Lewis. He takes office Sept. 1. In 1922 Dr. Marvin was elected president of the University of Arizona and therefore assistant to the president of the University of Southern California.

THREE SOUGHT IN SHOOTING OF MAN FOUND IN ALLEY

John Hanrath Tells Police He Was Fired on by Companion After Ride in County.

Police are investigating the shooting of John Hanrath, 28 years old, of 520 Hickory street, who was found wounded in the right thigh in an alley in the rear of 3440 Virginia avenue Saturday night. Hanrath, who is at City Hospital in a serious condition, told police he went riding in the southern section of St. Louis County Saturday night with three men. Stops were made at several roadhouses, Hanrath said. While driving back Hanrath said he was thrown from the machine on Lemay Ferry road and several shots were fired at him, one striking him in the thigh. The driver stopped and Hanrath said he was carried back to the machine and robbed of his gold watch and chain. He was again thrown from the car in the alley.

Hanrath was found by William Schumacher, 3440 Virginia avenue, who had driven into the alley to put his car in the garage.

2 SAILORS DROWNED TRYING TO SAVE WOMAN AT SEA

By the Associated Press.
GLASGOW, Scotland, June 13.—Mrs. Mary Traynor, whose home is in the United States, and two sailors who heroically tried to rescue her were drowned shortly after noon Saturday 600 miles from Ireland when Mrs. Traynor fell overboard from the steamship California.

Details of the tragedy were told meagerly in a wireless dispatch from the vessel received here today. When Mrs. Traynor fell overboard seamen Alister Gilchrist and John M. Isaac immediately jumped into the sea to rescue her, but because of the liner's speed they were soon far astern. Before a boat could be lowered or the vessel put about, all had disappeared. Mrs. Traynor had planned to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rodgers, living at Kirkintilloch, Dumbarton.

Facts About These Wonderful Shirts:

These are regular $1.95 to $2.95 Shirts from our regular stocks and were once offered in a much higher-priced sale. Every Shirt is guaranteed to fit and the styles are for Spring and Summer wear. Some of them are slightly counter soiled from handling, but a trip to the laundry will make them like new. We claim they are extraordinary values, and if this were not true you can rest assured we would not endeavor to stage this sale in such a gigantic way.

- They are all-perfect and well-known makes.
- Every Shirt cut with a full, roomy body.
- Each one with a perfectly proportioned chest.
- Fine quality, pearl buttons, well made button-holes.

- Hundreds of white Shirts in the sale.
- Many colors in novelty combinations.
- Regular sleeve lengths.
- The colors are guaranteed fast.
- Shirts retain color after repeated laundering.

MRS. LINDBERGH IN SOLITARY STROLL IN WASHINGTON

Mother of Flyer Slips Out of Temporary White House Unnoticed Before Capital City Is Astir.

GOES TO CHURCH WITH MRS. COOLIDGE

Dines in Evening at White House and Leaves at Midnight for Today's Festivities in New York.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
WASHINGTON, June 13.—Mrs. Evangeline Lodge Lindbergh enjoyed the luxury of a little stroll by herself yesterday before the city had thought about stirring from its Sunday morning rest. She slipped out a side entrance of No. 15 Dupont Circle, the President's temporary White House where she was a guest during the stay in the Capital of her distinguished son. It was a little before 8 o'clock. Even newspaper men in a group near the entrance to the house did not know she was abroad until one of them spied her on her return, just as she re-entered at the side door.

Behind the ropes increasing crowds waited under the shade trees of Dupont Circle and the avenues leading into it, all eyes on the President's house, eagerly scanning windows and doorways for a possible glimpse of the charming mother and her wonderful boy. They were not so patient either, calling "Lindy" good naturedly, applauding and cheering in an effort to get some response from the silent portals.

Acknowledge Plaudits of Crowd. Finally the White House limousine drew up, followed by an open touring car. The President and Mrs. Coolidge came out and with them Mrs. Lindbergh and her son, both smiling and bowing, acknowledging the plaudits of the crowd. Mrs. Lindbergh is acknowledged to be the most satisfying mother of a hero that could possibly be desired. Yesterday she was becomingly attired in a figured chiffon, roses on an ecru ground, made with panels and airy flounces, as cool looking as a raspberry ice. Her hat was the same wide black one she wore Saturday.

Mrs. Coolidge also had chosen a rose patterned chiffon with founced hem in black chiffon, with which she, too, wore a transparent black hat. One might almost imagine they had "had an early bouclier chat about 'what shall we wear?' It's such a hot day," so perfectly did their costumes harmonize.

The destination being church at the Metropolitan theater on F Street, a goodly crowd waited in that vicinity, but the route under the spreading trees of Massachusetts Avenue, past stately homes, in many cases boarded up for the summer, produced only surprised looks of onlookers who turned in a dazed way to wave and cheer behind the speeding cars.

It was observed that as the cars approached the theater, Lindbergh put on his hat and it was easy to imagine his mother suggesting it, in deference to the occasion. For Lindbergh is not the type voluntarily to wear a hat on a warm summer morning.

If, by chance, mother and son might have found the service to which they listened and in which they joined, a trifle long for a nice June day, no indication of it was given. Seven babies were baptized and Mrs. Lindbergh smiled sympathetically as the mothers and fathers attempted to keep them quiet. Lindbergh's appreciation of this part of the program seemed possibly rather negative.

The business of being the mother of a hero presented disadvantages as the unceasing round of ceremonies continued. There was the hot sun everywhere, as Mrs. Lindbergh stood with her son beside the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington, and on the greenward at Walter Reed Hospital.

Mother Enjoys Day. But despite the heat, Lindbergh's mother seemed to be enjoying it all. In fact she said as much to an admiring young woman, who, finding herself suddenly beside the White House car, dared to inquire of her if she thought it had been a nice day.

Seeing someone in conversation with his mother, Lindbergh leaned over to help out on the reply if necessary.

Eighteen or 20 of Virginia's fairest, determined to have a word with their romantic young idol, broke the lines as Mrs. Lindbergh and her son were sitting in their car at Arlington waiting to leave, and laughingly insisted on autographs. Lindbergh, blushing profusely, stared straight ahead with the utmost dignity until, catching his mother's amused glance, he broke into his famous smile, which partly appeased the young beauties for their disappointment in not obtaining the coveted signature.

After the flag services on the shady steps of the Capitol, the party rested at the White House, where Mrs. Lindbergh and Col. Lindbergh dined quietly with the President and Mrs. Coolidge.

Mother and Daughter and Another Woman Perish Near Denver.

By the Associated Press.
DENVER, Colo., June 13.—Three persons were drowned and damage amounting to many thousands of dollars resulted Saturday night from cloudbursts in this section. The dead: Mrs. Richard McNamara, 42 years old, swept into Dry Creek by an 18-foot wall of water; Martha McNamara, 14, her daughter; and Mrs. Philip Smith, 33, who was killed in Buckhorn Creek, near Loveland. Woman Perish Near Denver.
By the Associated Press.
DENVER, Colo., June 13.—Three persons were drowned and damage amounting to many thousands of dollars resulted Saturday night from cloudbursts in this section.
The dead: Mrs. Richard McNamara, 42 years old, swept into Dry Creek by an 18-foot wall of water;
Martha McNamara, 14, her daughter, and Mrs. Philip Smith, 55, swamped in Buckhorn Creek, near Lafayette. The McNamaras were preparing to retire when they heard the roar of the approaching waters. James McNamara, 21, and his sister, Mary, 17, died, but Mrs.

McNamara and her daughter, Martha, stayed to save a few personal belongings. When they left the house a wall of water swept them away. The bodies were recovered in the outskirts of Denver.

PLANE FACTORY FOR LINDBERGH GIVEN IMPETUS

Groundwork for $1,000-000 Corporation Laid at Meeting of St. Louis Industrial Leaders.

PRESIDENCY WILL BE OFFERED FLYER
H. D. Condie Heads Committee of Five Which Will Draw Up Plans for Proposed Plant.

The ground work for a proposed airplane factory, in which the presidency is to be offered to Col.
Lindbergh when he returns to St.
Louis, will be laid today at a meeting of the St. Louis business men eager to insure for the transatlantic flyer a business in line with his desire to further commercial aviation.

At a preliminary meeting yesterday at Racquet Club it was stated that the ultimate capitalization of the industry would be more than $1,000,000 and that the industrial leaders who are engaged in arranging the details of incorporation would give their services without charge.

After the meeting yesterday
Earl C. Thompson, one of Lind-bergh's backers, talked to the flyer by telephone at the temporary White House in Washington. He quoted Lindbergh as saying he had signed no contracts and would take no steps to fix his future occupation until after he had visited St.
Louis and conferred with his backers.

WOMAN HELD FOR SHOOTING OF SISTER'S SUITOR IN HOME
Charles Schulte Wounded by Mrs.
Mary Hart; Tried to Force Way Into House.

Mrs. Mary Hart, 27 years old, mother of two children, is held by police for the shooting last night of a suitor of her sister, Miss Carrie Cook, who attempted to enter the Hart home at 1522 Seventh boulevard over the protest of Mrs.
Hart. The suitor, Charles Schulte, 58 years old, of 117 Teddy avenue, is at city hospital in a serious condition due to a bullet in his chest.
Schulte met Miss Cook, who is 48 years old, last night about 8 o'clock at Broadway and Marion street and followed her home.
According to Mrs. Hart, Schulte pounded on the door and demanded admittance. When he was refused he forced his way and she fired three shots.

The Rev. S. H. Wainwright Tells of 39 Years in Orient.

Devotion to the abstract in India is such that merchants in the bazaars would rather argue about their wares than sell them, the Rev. S. H. Wainwright of Tokyo remarked in a sermon yesterday at St. John's Methodist Church.
American missions are "an unfinished tower," he said, costly to complete, but, if uncompleted, a future monument of rebuke. The Rev. Dr. Wainwright formerly was presiding elder of the Southern Methodist church in St. Louis. He has passed 39 years in the Orient and is secretary of an interdenominational society translating religious writings into Japanese.

FOREST LAKE, Minn., June 13.— Six persons, all of St. Paul, were drowned in Forest Lake, three and one-half miles southeast of here, when a rowboat with eight persons capsized.
Those drowned were: Haakon Ellason, 18 years old, his son, Peter, 8, his daughter, Olga, 3, and Mr. and Mrs. Hjalmar Hansen and their daughter, Ann, 2. Mrs. Ellason, 22, and her son, Herman, were saved. When about 800 feet from shore one of the children attempted to change seats and the boat overturned.

FOUR MUNI BASEBALL CONTESTS GO INTO EXTRA INNINGS

FOGG GIVES ONE HIT TO BELL TEAM

Bly-Moss Wins in Empire League; One-Armed Pitcher Allows Two Safeties; Other Hurlers Shine.

Extra-inning contests marked the municipal baseball program yesterday. The Shells and Motorbuses in the Independent League split even in a double-header, the second contest going 10 innings.

Other extra-inning contests resulted as follows: North St. Louis League, St. Edwards 3, St. Louis 10 (11 innings); Thomas E. Wilson League, North End 5, Annunciation 4 (12 innings); North Side League, St. Anthony 5, Leo Club 4 (10 innings).

Paul, one-armed pitcher in the DeMolay League, hurled perfection to a 11-to-9 victory over St. Louis, allowing only two hits. O'Shea duplicated this feat as the Century's best Watson-O'Rourke in the second game of a double bill in the Concordia League and Wilman of the Thomians turned in the best performance of the day when he gave Carroll B. M. A. only one hit, to win 5 to 0.

By-Moss walloped the Bell nine, 20 to 0, in the Empire League when Fogg let the losers down with a pair of hits.

LINDBERGH'S FLIGHT RECALLS CONTROVERSY

Fry's Magazine of 1909 Carried Debate—Experts Divided in Their Opinion.

LONDON, June 12.—Col. Lindbergh's flight across the Atlantic recalls a controversy that began in "Fry's Magazine" in 1909.

The subject of the controversy was, "Can we cross the Atlantic by airplane?" Nine experts, several of whom are no longer alive, took part in the discussion, and the following were the opinions expressed: Count Henry de la Vaulx: Quite possible one day. Not in most people's time.

Major (now Sir Robert) Baden-Powell: At present only a flight of fancy.

Hon. C. S. Rolls: Not in our time. Only when airplanes can carry large quantities of fuel, reserve operators, and reserve engines.

Captain (now Sir) Walter Windham: In a few years it will be considered anything but the eighth wonder of the world.

Sir Hiram Maxim: Quite possible, if some one can invent a machine or motor that will not waste half its energy in the fuel.

Frank Hedges Butler: Such a flight will assuredly one day be accomplished.

S. F. Edge: I have no doubt that one day such a flight will be comparatively common.

ROBBERS WITH MACHINE GUNS

WORK 7 HOURS FOR NOTHING

Chicago Police Discount Theory That Safeblowers Sought Formula for New Narcotic.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, June 12.—Mystery surrounding the raid of eight masked robbers who for seven hours early Sunday leisurely searched the plant of the $3,000,000 Abbott Chemical laboratories here, after binding and gagging two watchmen and barricading themselves, armed with three machine guns, was unsolved today.

Company officials, after a thorough checking of stamps and money, formula files and stocks of alcohol, narcotics, machines and serums, announced nothing was missing.

The company discounted a theory that the gang was seeking reported newly discovered formulas for a nonhabit-forming narcotic.

Company executives said today their chemists had perfected no such formula.

The gang told the watchmen they had been informed the company kept considerable money and stamps on hand. Two safes, 10 filing cabinets and desks and files on two floors were broken open.

The narcotic vaults were not found by the robbers.

OF 29 U. S. MAIL PLANES

Auction, Set for Thursday, Would Cost Citizens $15,000,000, Says Former Envoy.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, June 12.—Protest against the proposed sale of 29 air mail planes was voiced in a letter addressed to Postmaster General Harry S. New by Horace G. Knowles, former United States Minister to several Balkan states and Latin-American countries.

After quoting a statement by Assistant Postmaster Glover announcing an "old-fashioned auction" will be held June 16 at which 29 Douglas air mail planes will be offered for sale, Knowles wrote:

"It is safe to say that not one person in ten thousand would understand that to mean that on June 16, Second Assistant Postmaster Glover will break up the great Government owned trans-continental air mail system which required ten years to build and will do away with assets that cost the taxpayers more than $15,000,000."

In conclusion Knowles urged that the auction be postponed until the President has had an opportunity to learn the views of the public on the subject.

By the Associated Press.
MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 12.—While investigating the ownership of a limousine thought to have been stolen in Omaha, Neb., police have taken into custody three persons, one of whom, they say, is Robert Holt, 35 years old, of Kansas City, sought since September, when he was released by error from the Arkansas State penitentiary, after serving 11 months of a five-year term for a $60,000 swindle at Hot Springs.

Holt's arrest was followed by the apprehension of another man and a woman at a hotel, where two loaded revolvers were found in their rooms. They identified themselves as Thelma Faucett, 25, who says she married Holt in Mexico, and John Marshall Fitzpatrick, 22, of Kansas City.

Chamberlin and Levine Are Forced to Postpone Visits to Munich and Vienna Until Repairs Are Made.

GO TO BADEN-BADEN FOR BRIEF REST

Americans Decline Offer of Special German Machine, Preferring to Use Own Trans-Atlantic Ship.

By the Associated Press.
BADEN-BADEN, Germany, June 12.—Charles Chamberlin and Charles Levine were given an enthusiastic reception by a crowd of about 2000 at the railway station upon their arrival from Berlin this morning.

The burgomaster and members of the Municipal Council escorted the transatlantic flyers to their hotel, where there was another demonstration and a frantic rush for autographs. The airmen enjoyed their first railway journey in Europe and said the continental sleeping cars were preferable to those at home.

At Frankfurt and Karlsruhe they were serenaded by representatives of the Aero Club, delegations of German war aviators, and Boy and Girl Scouts.

They plan to tour the Black Forest and to leave for Bremen later part of the week to meet their wives, who are due Friday from New York.

Trouble With Valve Mechanism of Columbia.

By the Associated Press.
BERLIN, June 12.—Trouble with the valve mechanism of the transatlantic plane Columbia has brought disappointment to the people of Munich and Vienna. Charles D. Chamberlin and Charles Levine had to postpone their flights to those cities for several days until repairs can be made.

They were offered a special train by the German Aerial League, but preferred to wait in order to carry out their original intention of flying in the machine which carried them across the Atlantic from New York to Germany. The flight to Munich was to have taken place yesterday.

Elaborate preparations for the arrival of the Columbia at Munich had to be called off, and the great disappointment was evidenced throughout the city. Most of the populace learned by special bulletins of the postponement of the flight of the aviators, but many thousands could not be reached.

and waited patiently all last night around the Munich airfield.

After a week during which they were almost constantly feted and entertained, Chamberlin and Levine said good-bye to the American Embassy and left Berlin last night for Germany's watering resort, Baden-Baden, where they will rest.

They will meet their wives, now on the way from New York, at Bremen on June 15, after which the party will come to Berlin and pass a day here. Then it is expected their program of European flights will be resumed.

Provisional Pledge to Woman.

Levine has made a provisional promise to Theodora, German woman pilot, to consider providing her with a Bellanca plane similar to the Columbia, to enable her to try a flight across the ocean from Berlin to New York.

He is anxious to see her perform in the air and it is likely an exhibition will be arranged when he returns to Berlin.

He has expressed the belief, however, that a male pilot should accompany her on an attempt to fly to New York, explaining that he did not doubt her flying ability but felt that the strain of such a long flight might prove too much, no matter how strong a woman might be.

An invitation by the Soviet Aviation Promotion Organization to visit Moscow has not yet been received by the American flyers, who, however, said they would decline to accept it, as such a trip did not appear feasible.

CHICAGO, June 12.—On the second lap of her transatlantic trip which will take her over the vast stretch her son traversed by air, Mrs. E. C. Chamberlin of Denison, left Chicago yesterday on her way to New York, from whence she will sail to London.

Chamberlin's mother, who has been in Chicago only between trains, accompanied by her grandson, Robert Moffitt, Mrs. Chamberlin left the Capitol Limited at 2 p. m. yesterday. She is scheduled to arrive in New York at 2:55 p. m. today. Definite plans for her voyage are in the hands of New York agents, Mrs. Chamberlin said.

Double Valve Mechanism of Columbia.

By the Associated Press.

Lindbergh Lays Wreath on Grave Of Unknown Soldier and Visits Wounded Veterans at Hospital

Attends Church With President and Makes Brief Talk When He Is Decorated With Medal of Flag Association.

By CHARLES MICHELSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.
WASHINGTON, June 12.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh devoted his Sunday to good works. He attended church with his mother and President Coolidge, laid a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier and spent what time he could with the shut-ins at Walter Reed Hospital, giving particular attention to the aviators among the sick and maimed heroes.

Late in the afternoon, he paid a brief visit to his beloved plane, which he probably counts as one more religious duty, and he concluded the day by attending the vesper services commending the adoption of the American flag, receiving at the hands of Charles Evans Hughes one more decoration—the Cross of Honor of the United States Flag Association.

While he was among the first aircraft at Bolling Field he delighted the army by inspecting one of its new pursuit planes. He climbed into the cockpit, manipulated the levers and the controls, and seemed to get more fun out of it than anything else he has done since his return. He declined, however, to fly the machine because he had other engagements to fulfill. But he had an interesting discussion of the technicalities of planes with the army men who clustered around him.

Another thing he did at Bolling Field. He talked to the first American girl since his arrival. The fortunate beauty is Miss Sallie Finney. She was betrothed to Stanton H. Wooster, who was killed with the Nautilus, while they were preparing to enter the transatlantic race.

First Miss Finney met Lindbergh's mother. The flyer joined the group and they talked about mutual friends and the fellowship of aviation. She accompanied the party to the vesper service—not in Lindbergh's car but in the one immediately following it and she walked with him to the enclosure for the flag celebration.

Makes Two Speeches.

Lindbergh made two short speeches during the day—the first at Walter Reed Hospital, where he pointed out that there was more heroism in war than in peace—more even than in flying across the Atlantic ocean; and the second in response to Charles Evans Hughes' presentation of the flag medal, in which the flyer insisted that his plane was entitled to an equal share of the glory.

The visit to the invalid soldiers appealed to Lindbergh more than any of the other functions of which he has been the guest. He has a feeling for the men in fighting who are the desire of the people to see him rather amuses him more than anything else, but he recognizes that they do and when the suggestion was made that he give this pleasure to the men in fighting, he shared in the enthusiasm for him but could not come to him, he declared that whatever else he had to skip he would make this pilgrimage.

Lindbergh has been tractable about all arrangements made for him, though showing no particular enthusiasm. But this is a feeling of his. He has a feeling that the shows and receptions were for him; this was a chance for him to do something for others.

To Church With Coolidge.

Attending church, President Coolidge, and Lindbergh, a formal cutaway and carried his silk hat, but his guest stuck to a rather rakish sack suit, blue, with a pin stripe, and he wore the same brown Fedora that covered his head on his arrival in Washington.

Though the Lindbergh family are Lutherans, the service of the Congregationalists seemed no mystery either to him or his mother, who sat in the new of the Coolidge box.

The popular idea of a dashing aviator is that of a gay young blade with all the fashionable vices. That is not Lindbergh. One of his associates, describing him, said: "He is the only aviator I ever knew who does not smoke, drink or use profane language."

Incidentally, except for his talk with Miss Finney, he appears still to be girl-shy. During his dashes around the city and over the Virginia side of the Potomac, the Sunday crowds were lined up every foot of the way, and girls and boys would crowd him. They waved to him and cried his name, but only rarely was there so much as an answering wave. Generally he smiles his eyes focused ahead, and he kept his face down during the long progress. Whether this was his instinct of what befitted the Sabbath or just bashfulness in the face of so much feminine attention he only knows.

Dodges Bouquet.

One enthusiastic girl heaved a bunch of daisies at him as he whirled past. He dodged and the bouquet flew over the car and into the hands of spectators on the opposite side of the road.

One of the officers of the cruiser

Memphis who stood by his side as they came up the river yesterday, while votaries in every sort of craft came as close to the vessel as was permitted, tells that as one boat load of girls came within hailing distance, he rallied the hero on his coldness.

"There," he said, "look at that pretty one in blue—wave to her." "No," said Lindbergh, "I'm afraid she is too busy."

A small boy was pushed up by his mother as Lindbergh was walking from the tomb of the Unknown Soldier to his car, and reached up his hand. Lindbergh shook it. That was the only response he made to advances, male or female, during the whole proceedings.

The first Washington saw of him yesterday was when he came to a window of the temporary White House in response to a terrific handclapping from the crowd that had been waiting beyond the police lines since daybreak. The thoroughfare the whole day was roped off so that the nearest approach is across a wide street, but as far as a view was obtainable of the front of the mansion the people gathered and waited. Every once in a while a cheer was raised.

The crowd had learned that this sometimes brought their idol within view, but he was busy yesterday and only showed himself twice. Once as he was at a window a tiny youngster—he could not have been more than five—daringly tore across the street and gained the opposite walk. His mother tried to catch him but the police were ahead of her and presently a big blue coat gathered him up and restored him to the public side despite his wails of protest. Lindbergh grinned and vanished.

This was the last time he seemed to tempt to rush the police lines. There were none but the house guests at the President's luncheon. Soon afterwards the first automobile to escort the hero to Arlington drew up and John Hays Hammond, chairman of the arrangement committee, alighted and went inside. Presently he reappeared with Lindbergh, and they were the aviator's mother and Lieut. Francis Grayling, one of the President's aides. They paused for a moment in the portico, in acknowledgment of the cheers that hailed their arrival. In this attitude, it is stated, Japan is taking into consideration possible future of the forthcoming conference, wishing to be assured that in such event the honor and spirit of the Washington pact will continue unimpaired.

Premier Gathers Grain He Personally Sowed and Enters It in Competition for Prizes.

By the Associated Press.
ROME, June 12.—Having entered his little farm at Carpegna, near Terni, the wheat-raising competition promoted by the Minister of National Economy and having plowed and sowed it himself, Premier Mussolini paid a surprise visit to Carpegna Saturday to supervise personally the beginning of the harvest.

For several hours he worked at the head of farm laborers gathering specimens of arid and mountain wheat, which mature several weeks earlier than the ordinary kinds. The group of inspectors, appointed to tour the farms entered in the competition for cash prizes, admired the Premier's skill and listened to his speech, in which he pointed out the superior merits of the "precocious" wheat, illustrating his argument by specimens from a special test field on his property. About 140 different varieties of wheat from all parts of Italy were planted for experimental purposes on this field.

JAPAN TO SEEK EQUAL RATIO AT NAVAL PARLEY

Geneva Delegates Instructed to Offer Equality Proposal to U. S. and Great Britain.

'LIBERTY TO BUILD'
RIGHT REQUESTED

Tokio Government Considers It Is Entitled to Have Even More Cruisers Than America.

By the Associated Press.
TOKIO, June 12.—The Associated Press is informed from an authoritative source that Japan's delegation to the Geneva Naval Conference is instructed to propose an equal ratio, with a maximum limit, for auxiliary vessels.

The contention is that Japan is theoretically entitled to have even more cruisers and submarines than America, owing to her greater necessity of protecting trade routes.

It also is argued that an equal ratio with Great Britain and the United States will constitute no sacrifice whatever, because it is virtually impossible for auxiliary vessels to operate offensively across the wide expanse of the Pacific.

The Japanese delegation, it is understood, will declare that Japan does not intend to build the maximum but that what is wanted is "liberty to build" equally with the other powers.

Desirable as Courtesy.

The delegates will seek Japan's financial and economic cooperation as showing that, even though granted an equal ratio, she would never enter into a building competition or accept any agreement which would force on her the obligation to build in excess of her own treaty powers. It is contended the stipulation for an equal footing is desirable for the sake of international courtesy and good feeling.

It also is understood the delegates will announce opposition to the discussion on any phase of the Washington naval limitation treaty, insisting that the Geneva conference and the Washington treaty are entirely separate and distinct.

In this attitude, it is stated, Japan is taking into consideration possible future of the forthcoming conference, wishing to be assured that in such event the honor and spirit of the Washington pact will continue unimpaired.

HISTORY TURNED BACK WHEN MARCONI WEDS

Rome Assumes Ancient Aspect During Marriage of Scientist and Young Countess.

By the Associated Press.
ROME, June 12.—The marriage of Senator Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of the wireless, and Countess Maria Christina Bezi-Scali, young and beautiful member of an old Roman family of the papal aristocracy, was celebrated yesterday with great pomp and splendor. The ancient capitol, where warriors and poets in former days were crowned, assumed its long-gone aspect in honor of Marconi, whom Italy considers her greatest scientist.

The bride pair were received with military honors. They passed into the gorgeous hall, draped with red damask, with golden fringe, where Prince Potomanski, Governor of Rome, performed the civil marriage. He read the articles of the civil code establishing the reciprocal rights and duties of those who marry. He also delivered a short address, warmly congratulating the pair and expressing the hope that the happiness of the marriage would contribute to the further success of that science cent which Marconi is the leading exponent.

Marquis, Guglielmi, vice-president of the Chamber, and Marquis Solari, Marconi's companion in his studies and discoveries for the past quarter of a century, acted as witnesses for the bride. Prince Orsini, assistant to the pontifical throne, and Marquis Sacchetti, papal equerry, were the witnesses for the bridegroom.

After all had signed the register, the ceremony was presented by Prince Potomanski to the pair as a souvenir. Although the hour of the wedding was kept secret, crowds had gathered around the building, and wedding parties left the capitol, those assembled cheered and threw flowers.

The ceremony was followed by a reception at the Bezi-Scali Palace, where flowers had been arranged in abundance. More than a thousand of the nobility were present at the reception. Presents for the bride came from all sections, those from Marconi occupying an entire glass case.

The religious ceremony will be celebrated at noon Wednesday.

'CRAZY' WAISTCOATS THE RAGE

Poor Work Girl Who Made Patchwork Garment Started Fad.

LONDON, June 12.—Made from all sorts of bits and pieces of many-colored velvet and brocade, "crazy" waistcoats are among the spring vagaries of fashion.

The waistcoats look as if they might have been adapted from great-grandmother's best patchwork bedcover. Some say the fashion originated through a little work girl in a dressmaking establishment. She was soiled with a great deal of work, and she could not afford to buy a piece of the rich satin or similar materials from which most are made; so she collected odd fragments of silk and satin, and made a patchwork waistcoat.

The "crazy" waistcoat is being worn with lightweight spring tailored costumes, and is likely to prove extremely popular for slipping on over summer frocks, especially white ones.

COOLIDGE PRAISES STIMSON AS NICARAGUA'S PEACE-MAKER

Commends Syracuse U. for Conferring LL. D. Degree on Former Secretary of War.

By the Associated Press.
SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 12.—President Coolidge, in a letter read at Syracuse University commencement today, applauded the conferring of the degree of LL. D. on Col. Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of War.

Stimson recently returned from Nicaragua, where as personal representative of the President, he succeeded in putting an end to the revolution there.

"It is a real satisfaction," the President's letter said, "to learn that Syracuse University is to confer upon Col. Henry L. Stimson the degree of Doctor of Laws. It is not only proper recognition of his lifelong good citizenship, the service he has rendered in time of war, and the administration of the great office of the Secretary of War, but especially his recent accomplishment in going as the representative of the President to Nicaragua and bringing to a close the disorder and bloodshed which was becoming a great menace to the well-being of all the inhabitants of that country."

"In doing this he not only relieved the people of Nicaragua but demonstrated the disinterested desire of America to be instrumental in assisting a neighboring republic to maintain peace and tranquility within its border. His tact, wisdom and discretion had a wholesome and stabilizing influence reaching far beyond the confines of the immediate country affected."

"In conferring upon him a degree you are recognizing the eminent services of a peace-loving American to general cause of humanity."

BIG FRENCH COMMUNIST VOTE Newspapers Supporting Poincare Candidate Call Result Alarming.

By the Associated Press.
PARIS, June 12.—Although a Government candidate defeated a Communist in an election for the Chamber of Deputies held in the Department of Aube yesterday, the margin of victory was so small as to arouse a great deal of comment. The candidate sponsored by Premier Poincare received 28,158 votes, while the Communist polled 25,027.

Newspapers of the Right point out that this number of Communist votes out of 67,512 in an agricultural section is alarming. The opposition newspapers declare a coalition of all other parties was necessary to defeat the Communist.

By the Associated Press.
BARCELONA, Spain, June 12.—Commander Francisco de Pinedo, Italian aviator, arrived here today from Lisbon in continuation of his four-continent flight.

He left Lisbon at 6:30 a. m. today. His plan is to fly to Madrid to make a visit of courtesy to King Alfonso, then to proceed to Rome, completing his four-continent flight.

LISBON, June 12.—Before starting for Barcelona today the Italian aviator, De Pinedo, flew over the Tagus River, dropping a wreath over the spot where a Portuguese aviator was drowned last Tuesday. Two Portuguese hydro-airplanes escorted him down the river.

Last night De Pinedo was entertained by the Government at a banquet at which the Italian Minister was present. The Minister of Foreign Affairs bestowed the cross of Santiago on him.

POLICE ROUT UPTON SINCLAIR AND AUTO ON BOSTON COMMON

To Make Test Writer Will Offer for Sale Own Book With "Hamlet" and Bible.

By the Associated Press.
BOSTON, June 12.—In a public address on Boston Common, Upton Sinclair, whose novel "Oil" has been barred here, announced yesterday that he would offer for sale one copy of "Hamlet," one copy of the Bible, and one copy of his own forbidden work on Thursday. He came here to make a test case of the Boston book censorship.

When a police sergeant demanded to see his permit to hold a public meeting, Sinclair produced one issued to Alfred Baker Lewis, secretary of the Socialist Party of Boston, who accompanied him. The officer then asked for Sinclair's permit to drive an automobile on the Common, but none was forthcoming. To save the writer from arrest the crowd pushed the car off the Common to a nearby street.

Sinclair, in exchanging repartee with police, said that but for the danger of being charged with bribery, he would offer them $1000 to arrest him.

WAR MEMORIAL UNVEILED

Commemorates Capture of Town
Few Hours Before Armistice.

By the Associated Press.
MONS, Belgium, June 12.—A bronze plaque, commemorating the entry of Canadian troops into this city on Nov. 11, 1918, a few hours before the Armistice, was unveiled in the City Hall here yesterday.

Lieutenant-General Sir Henry Burdall, who commanded the Second Canadian Division, unveiled the plaque. Rodolphe Lemieux, Speaker of the Canadian House of Commons, delivered an oration. There was a guard of honor of Canadian ex-service men now resident in Great Britain and a detachment of Belgian troops.

LEAGUE COUNCIL FAVORS CODIFYING LAW OF NATIONS

United States Expected to Participate if International Conference Is Held in Netherlands.

By the Associated Press.
GENEVA, June 12.—The forty-fifth session of the League of Nations Council was opened today. One of the Council's first acts was to approve the action of Sir Eric Drummond, secretary-general, in extending the facilities of the League to the three-power naval limitation conference which is to open here a week from today.

A call for an international conference for the codification of international law will be made by the Netherlands, at the request of the League of Nations, providing the League Assembly ratifies the views expressed at today's council session.

One of the main reasons for holding the conference in the Netherlands is the desire to assure the participation of the United States and other nonmembers of the League. The Netherlands is an important place held by The Hague in framing international legal codes, said a report presented by Foreign Minister Zaleski of Poland which the council adopted.

Chamberlain Answers Attack.

Geneva newspapers today criticized the suggestion, declaring that it cloaked a desire on the part of the European statesmen to settle their political problems secretly outside of Geneva. Sir Austen asserted that he wished to do nothing to impair the authority and usefulness of the league but added that it was difficult for the various foreign ministers to come to Geneva so often. He expressed the opinion that the best interests of the league would be served by reducing the number of meetings, thus assuring the presence of the various foreign ministers.

"Moreover," he added, "as the world settles down, we can confidently hope that there will be fewer questions for submission to the council."

No decision was taken on the question as Sir Austen said that he did not wish to press the matter.

Balkan Crisis Brought Up.

The Balkan crisis which started with a dispute between Italy and Yugoslavia over the political status of Albania was brought to the front last night by a communication from the Belgrade Government.

The session begins today.

This note minimizes the importance of the recent controversy between Yugoslavia and Albania, precipitated by the arrest of the Yugoslavian Dragoman M. Glushchewitch at Tirana and the subsequent withdrawal of the Yugoslav Minister from Albania. It declares, however, that if the council believes that this incident "in its relation to others" is grave, then Yugoslavia is ready to take it before the council, provided the Albanian problem in its entirety is examined.

This is an allusion to the Tirana pact between Albania and Italy, which, Yugoslavia alleged, created a virtual Italian protectorate over Albania.

Italy is said to oppose any study

Ozark Playgrounds Cleanup.

The dispatch from Springfield, Mo., telling of the movement for a simultaneous cleanup campaign of towns in the Ozarks, started by the Ozark Playgrounds Association, emphasizes neatness and attractive appearance, but says nothing about sanitation.

Nine towns have entered the competition for the award, and we are told that: "Among the various features to be taken into consideration by the judges will be the appearance of grounds and buildings, both public and private, appearance of lawns, parkways and walks, landscaping, cleanliness of alleys, back yards and the ground in the rear of business establishments, and the condition of streets. Special attention, it was said, will be given to the appearance of garages, not only those in the residence section, but those serving the public."

Very good, so far as it goes. But it is a fact that many towns and villages in the Ozarks have paid little or no attention to sanitation. They have had spells of cleaning streets of weeds and refuse. Some hotels have been equipped with hot and cold water and modern bathrooms. I understand they use the septic tank system, sewers being out of the question. But wells supply the drinking water, and septic tanks are very rare. Even at county courthouses there is a total lack of modern sanitary equipment, and a well in front of the building, with a tin cup for the convenience of passersby, is apt to be contaminated with typhoid germs.

Let us not ignore these facts, out of a foolish regard for appearances. Towns that clean up in front but neglect elementary sanitation of the kind suggested will pose as whitened sepulchers.

Street Signs Visible at Night.

Some twenty years ago the Post-Dispatch put on a campaign with complete success for street signs that could be seen at night. These signs which are still in good condition are being removed with the old gas lamp posts and we are again without street signs that can be read at night.

Can you call this to the attention of the proper city officials?

A Dry Lecture.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
R. E. OWEN, field secretary of the Anti-Slavery League of Nebraska, lectured at the Methodist Church here in our town May 23. His subject was "We Will Never Give Up."

I caught no inspiration. I got no thrill. I got no kick from the lecture. The major discussion was a repetition of the often-discussed themes of the subject. His high points were extravagant expressions subject to debate.

His allusion to the passive and active part of the churches simply shows the Protestant church has been more active in trying to regulate man's appetite and habits by law—a very serious thing for any religious body to attempt. Just let me say to the credit of the "Church of the Big C," as the lecturer called it, that if the Protestant church would attend to its spiritual affairs as devoutly as the church with "Big C" it would have less time to meddle with our personal rights.

When the clergy control our lawmakers we have tyranny complete. When our religious organizations have reached that point where one of the adherents can stand in an American pulp and boast that the little church on Main street dictates the policies of our Legislatures, we are very close to the days of the inquisition and rack.

I can recall but two statesmen who yield to no sect, creed or crusader. They are Al Smith and Jim Reed, and were we to elect one of them President the wrath of the little church on Main street would have no terrors for them when they saw duty conflicting.

The lecturer's stab at the press, "the palladium of all liberties," was "the unkindest stab of all."

Free press, free speech, free thought—are the safeguards of all liberties.

The Good Old Times.

In the Post-Dispatch of June 2 "Ami Wrong" takes a nasty fling at the women and men of 30 years ago. Well, "Ami Wrong," the women of those days were modest, properly clothed and queenly and did not look like the hybrid one sees on the streets nowadays. As for the men, they were brave, intellectual and chivalrous, and their manly appearance was in striking contrast to the beardless, hatless, effeminate-looking males who now wear wrist watches and balloon trousers and who say "puppah" and "mumma."

If you can see no connection between a painted face and knee length costumes and immodesty, then you can see no connection between burglary and crime. According to your illogical reasoning, a woman of easy virtue is a lady and a burglar is an honest man. H. F. R.

END OF THE BIRGER GANG.

The long reign of gangsterism in rural Illinois is ending. Gang leader Birger and four of his followers have been indicted for the murder of State Highway Patrolman Price and Mrs. Price. The information on which this indictment was returned was obtained by a reporter for the Post-Dispatch from Art Newman, for years a crony in crime of Birger's. Newman repeated this confession to a special grand jury on Saturday.

The reliability of the Newman confession remains to be established or disproved in the fair trial which the law vouchsafes the accused men. Pending that trial comment would ordinarily be withheld. But since a Circuit Judge in Illinois has been quoted as challenging the statement it is permissible, we believe, to say that the version of the murders as related by Newman is appallingly convincing. In detail and entirety it reads like the testimony of an eye witness. It seems incredible that Newman could have concocted the story. To assume that he did is to credit him with an imagination and plausibility which, in the nature of things, cannot logically be granted him.

And brutal beyond belief as is the story of the murder of Price and his wife, it fits in with the general pattern of the Birger gang's operations. For there is another murder charge at Birger's door—that of Mayor Adams of West City. This, too, is the confession of another henchman, who has told how he carried out Birger's instructions to kill Adams. Back of those specific crimes is the swaggering, insolent career of organized outlawry and terrorism which Birger and the rival Shelton gang have written in the record of Illinois.

The curtain is about to fall on that shameful spectacle of criminality. The law, so long flouted and degraded, will presently speak. That the law will speak in the grim terms of justice nobody can doubt. The part the Post-Dispatch has played in terminating this hideous orgy and revitalizing law in Illinois has been described by State's Attorney Roy C. Martin as "a great public service." That, of course, will be the verdict of the decent citizenship of Illinois.

TWO MISSOURI GUARDSMEN.

Mr. Dwight Davis appears smilingly in the photographs of the Lindbergh reception in Washington. He seems a little overweight physically, but mentally in good trim, and he seems to be registering pleasant thoughts and memories. His face is that of a man who sips a reminiscent vintage of happy flavor.

The Missouri National Guard saw some tremendous days in the World War. The bayonets of its division won back from the enemy the good valley of the Aire, and much praise and also considerable blame, the criticism coming from regular army inspectors and others. Recently praiseworthy things have been printed in the Saturday Evening Post and Liberty, all of which facts, as well as criticisms, were printed in the Post-Dispatch eight years ago.

Saturday the national capital devoted itself to the joyful task of welcoming the daring young aviator whose spectacular crossing of the Atlantic has won the acclaim of the world with a completeness and fervor probably never before seen in all history.

Mr. Davis, as Secretary of War, sat at the right hand of the President, who outlined the fame of the young flyer in words which were heard by millions of Americans throughout the country. He is the same Davis who, as a Lieutenant-Colonel and a Missouri Guardsman, stood at Montebello Wood, in the full tide of battle, and saw Rieger form up his band for the storming of Exermont while the division was being shot to pieces.

Young Lindbergh, marked with modesty and poise, also is a Missouri Guardsman. Both these men were sent to the pavilion before the Washington Monument from the armory at Grand avenue and Market street.

It seems that the reds are just as disturbed about capitalist propaganda as we are about red propaganda.

McADOO'S JEREMIAD.

When Mr. McAdoo said that courageous leadership is a vital public need of the times, as he did to the students of Tusculum College, he stated an obvious truth. But with his idea of what constitutes courageous leadership, as elaborated in his speech, comparatively few thoughtful citizens, we believe, will agree.

That speech was simply a prohibition harangue, on about the intellectual level of Maj. Roy A. Haynes' efforts. Unification was shrieked repeatedly, and everybody who questions the wisdom or practicability of prohibition was, by implication, a traitor to his country—and involved in a conspiracy to wreck our institutions.

That sort of thing is old stuff. The country has gotten past it. We have had seven years of prohibition. Possibly that is too short a period for so extraordinary an experiment to prove itself. But has it, in this period, given any convincing evidence of merit, any sound promise that it would ultimately prove itself? Has it not, on the contrary, disproved itself?

Those are the questions, we submit, the seven years' trial pose to the American people. Those are the questions which men with genuine claim to courageous leadership or competent leadership must honestly and earnestly face, because men and women are everywhere asking themselves those questions.

To say that prohibition, from the practical standpoint of enforcement, is at its lowest ebb today is to state a fact which all experience and observation confirm. We believe it may be asserted with equal truth that popular confidence in the enforceability of prohibition is also at nadir. In the face of such facts the recent McAdoo jeremiad is empty rant. In the presence of such grave realities appeals to emotionalism are offensively out of order. In all sincerity and by every test of good citizenship the time has come, in the discussion of this subject, to consult our intelligence, our common sense and our self-respect.

We endorse the judgment of the New York Evening Post in its comment on the McAdoo speech. That once-boned paper, converted by the facts, acknowledges the need for courage and candor on this question and it exercises those virtues by asserting that "we do not want to see financial dross use the power that still lingers in the tail-end of this period to block those who really have the courage to fight for modification and temperance."

There is the issue. Shall we go on with the tragic fraud of prohibition or undertake to reconstruct and re-establish the wholesome practice of temperance? The courage, common sense and self-respect of the American people will ultimately answer, and there can be no doubt as to what the answer will be.

WRONG WAY TO GET REVENUE.

In its statement defending its action in refusing to set apart the special taxes voted by the people for the support of the Public Library, the Zoo and the Art Museum, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment declares that it had no idea of withholding any needed funds from any of these institutions. If necessary, it says, it will increase the funds.

The reason given for taking over these special taxes for the general revenue, however, is that the city's limit of taxation is too low to meet the needs of other departments of the city. In short, the city hall took over the taxes because it wanted the money for other purposes. The two statements are irreconcilable, and the defense lacks both sincerity and frankness.

The statement adds that when the people voted the taxes they yielded far less than they do now. The board insists that the people did not intend to vote so much for these institutions. This is merely an arbitrary construction put upon the intention of the voters when they voted the taxes.

We do not question the statement that the limit of taxation for municipal purposes is too low, or that the city needs more revenue. It would require a searching investigation of municipal expenditures to determine precisely how much revenue the city needs on a basis of economical and efficient management. We know the city is short of funds.

Wholly apart from this question the need ought to be met in a different way. We do say that seizing the special taxes voted by the people for these institutions was a high-handed procedure. It ignored and defied the will of the people as expressed at the polls.

It has been decided by the Associate City Counselor that under a decision of the State Supreme Court the Art Museum tax is valid and must be paid over. We do not doubt that the principle applied by the Supreme Court to the Art Museum tax will hold good in the case of the Public Library and the Zoo tax. In that event the whole procedure of the city authorities will be condemned as arbitrary and illegal.

Having been convicted of one blunder in this tax-grabbing scheme, the municipal administration should retrace its steps and proceed in a legal and proper way to secure whatever revenue it needs, in accord with the popular will, without threatening the usefulness of three great St. Louis public institutions.

IN THE AIR AGAIN.

The palmy days of 1923, when American aviators smashed record after record for speed, altitude and weight carrying, are returned again. Within the past two months American airmen have broken world's records eight times, knocking down marks that had been held by European flyers.

The program of record making began in April when Chamberlin and Acosta, in a Bellanca monoplane, remained aloft for more than 51 hours for a new air-plane endurance record. Then Capt. Hawthorne C. Gray of Scott Field ascended in a balloon to 42,470 feet, an altitude record for all classes of aircraft, and the highest level ever reached by man.

Meanwhile, the navy was busy. It opened its offensive on existing seaplane records with a new type plane, the Vought "Corsair," a two-place machine of unusual performance. Lieut. George R. Henderson, who had the first whirl at the controls, took the plane to 22,175 feet with a load of 500 kilograms aboard, for a world's altitude mark for loaded seaplanes.

Then Lieut. S. W. Callaway, with a useful load of 100 kilograms in the same plane, broke the speed record for 100 kilometers for loaded seaplanes, averaging 147 miles an hour. To wind up the "Corsairs' tests, Lieut. James D. Barner took the same plane and load over the 500-kilometer course for its third record, averaging 136 miles an hour.

Turning then to single-seaters, the navy sent up Lieut. C. C. Champion in a new Wright "Apache," and he broke the seaplane altitude record, climbing to 33,455 feet and reaching that height in the unprecedented time of 25 minutes after he had left the water.

These were the contributions of the services to aviation's hall of records. Just a few weeks later Capt. Lindbergh, a National Guard officer, with both military and civilian records, broke the world's distance record by flying from New York to Paris. He set unofficial records for his one-man flight from San Diego to St. Louis and his feat in taking off the heaviest load ever carried by a 225-horsepower motor.

His performance was capped within a few days by the Chamberlin-Levine flight to Germany, in the same plane that had started things by making the endurance record.

It is significant to note that all of the record-breaking planes were equipped with air-cooled motors of the Wright or Pratt & Whitney types. Developed to their present excellence by American engineers, they are unquestionably the greatest contribution to the advancement of flying in the past five years. Coupled with the splendid new airplanes which American designers are bringing closer and closer to perfection, they are a guarantee of great things to American flying.

A DEMOCRATIC SLOGAN.

As a Democratic slogan for 1928, "Eight years of Wall street, now give Main street a chance," which won the prize offered by the Woman's National Democratic Club, expresses an excellent idea. It is a call for a return to democratic government for the whole people from the present rule of a plutocracy of tariff barons and other privileges.

It is so admirable, indeed, that we hesitate to suggest that some persons may possibly misinterpret the use of the term "Main street" as calling for the nomination of a candidate of the drab and conventional nature which this term has connoted ever since Sinclair Lewis wrote his popular sociological novel. This would be unfortunate, inasmuch as the people who actually desire to see a change of party in Washington are surely not, if they may be judged by their current preferences in the line of prospective candidates, looking for a President of this sort. They are demanding, rather, a brilliant and significant one. They want a President who can arouse them, as did Roosevelt, or one who can inspire them with sublime national and international ideals, as did Wilson. They at least want a man and administration that will not serve privilege or bow to the money power.

TO BERLIN!

From the New York World.
CHAMBERLIN passed over the Dortmund air-drome shortly after 4 a. m. He dropped very low, calling out: "To Berlin! To Berlin!" The aviation police signalled the direction.

It is a strange prank of history—to have that slogan, "To Berlin!" shouted back at us again after an interval of nine years by a young American aviator hunting for a ban forever from this country "goods delivered to Berlin. The German delegation at Versailles had just filed its plea that "demands in this treaty go beyond the strength of the German people." Germans were Huns, a new war-after-the-war was just beginning, and not for many years were the German people to be admitted to the society of civilized nations. In the United States the American Defense Society was in the middle of its stirring campaign to ban forever from this country "goods made by bloodstained German hands." A shipload of German toys had reached New York. The American Defense Society demanded that "this direct challenge by Germany be met by the boycott of the German products."

On June 5, 1927, an American airplane which had hopped off from Long Island flew across the Rhine and came down, short of its goal, but after a great achievement, to receive a royal welcome from a friendly people. A crowd of 10,000 had waited at Berlin. Representatives of the German Government had reached the flying field at daybreak. Bulletins of the flight had been broadcast over the nation. A squadron of German planes had been sent out from Tempelhof air-drome to pick up Chamberlin, if they could, and guide him on his journey. His welcome in Berlin promises to be historic. And from the French coast to Paris, through the night, the French Government lit an air lane with flares and rockets to help Chamberlin find his way across France into Germany, on the old road "to Berlin." Good-will has made as much progress in the last eight years as the art of transatlantic flying.

It is significant to note that all of the record-breaking planes were equipped with air-cooled motors of the Wright or Pratt & Whitney types. Developed to their present excellence by American engineers, they are unquestionably the greatest contribution to the advancement of flying in the past five years. ## RISE OF AMERICAN CIVILIZATION.

From Carl von Dorn's review in the June Century of a new work by Prof. Charles A. and Mary Beard.

THIS is the only general history of the United States known to me which seems to be aware at every step that Americans have been wrong as well as men. Furthermore, while emphasizing the realistic motives which have given Americans in general, it finds time to analyze, with an abundance of sympathy, the romantic aspirations which have given American civilization its color as the realistic ones have given it its shape. Nothing that has actually happened in America is neglected only the things which are merely pretended to have happened.

The Beards, while historians, have the gift for reality, which commonly goes with other occupations. The result is that in reading "The Rise of American Civilization" I never once found that I had got up into that easy dream of life in which the literary momentum without any particular reference to dissembling facts. On the contrary, I found myself, through all these pages, steadily held down to what I believe to be the world in which men truly live. If, approaching some familiar episode in American history, I started off ahead of my historians along the path which I supposed they would take, I was often pulled back. And each time I realized that I still had certain conventional notions about the motives for colonization or the processes of the Revolution or the details of the expansion westward or the issues involved in the Civil War or the methods of industrial expansion or the secrets of imperialism. On nearly every point I was thoroughly convinced by the arguments brought forward. Reading the Beards after, say, Bancroft in a good deal like reading Tolstoy after Fenimore Cooper. Unavoidably they must be compared with the H. G. Wells of "The Outline of History." They have indeed a smaller topic, and they start with a less brilliant rush than Mr. Wells'. But in other respects I think they have beaten him at this game.

On June 5, 1927, an American airplane which had hopped off from Long Island flew across the Rhine and came down, short of its goal, but after a great achievement, to receive a royal welcome from a friendly people. East and West

In a recent number of the New York Times Magazine there appeared a very significant article by H. L. Duffus entitled "East and West: A Widening Cleavage." "For the third or fourth time since the Civil War," writes Duffus, "the Western farmer on the warpath. Again he is seriously considering the immortal words of the poet, 'The West is a different world from the East.' The present protest is not merely the echo of an old. The Middle West has grown population, in wealth, in social position, in self-reliance, despite temporary ups and downs, to become self-conscious. It has evolved a sectional patriotism. Beyond all theory there is a divergence between the East, which lives primarily by its machine, and the West, which still lives primarily by its land and wealth. The farmer wrestling with the salesman, wrestling with the unwilling purchaser, or an enemy in a factory, giving a half to 2000 bolts a day."

While Mr. Duffus is concerned wholly with the economic and social antagonism that is bound to be inevitable between the manufacturing East and the agricultural Middle West, his thesis has a more economic and political significance. It would be no difficult matter to begin where Mr. Duffus ends and show how the economic domination of the East tends to discourage the development of indigenous Middle Western culture—that is to say a distinctive American culture—for if we are to develop a recognizable American culture, it can scarcely be in keeping with the fashions that prevail in polyglot New York.

It might be said that there is nothing to hinder any Middle Westerner in making a genuine contribution to American literature, if the ability be his. But is not wholly true. Note the character of "successful" novels dealing with Middle Western life. Obviously they have not been written in keeping with the Middle Western consciousness. Their success has been to disappear the way of flattering the Eastern banite with his curious prejudice regarding life in "the cornbelt," the "alfalfa regions." As a result the prevailing literary picture of Middle Western life is a very caricature. The writers naturally wished to "succeed" and they wrote about it in the only possible way. ## The Week

NOT at all naughty but rather nice is Colleen Moore's picture, "Naughty But Nice" at the Ambassador. It is one of those light little things typical Colleen and while a good many laughs center around the antics of a caterer and a young man who just can't keep his trousers from falling off at the most important moments there is a good deal of fun in the film. Colleen Moore is a little rich girl at a "society boarding school" who has a hair and horn-rimmed spectacles keep her from being popular. She bobs her hair and then away her glass—maybe then she didn't really know about it. She is prohibited—she is the belle of the town. Then, of course, she brings a boy who scorned her when she was homey, to her feet. The picture is a good one. Actors will enjoy it thoroughly, we think we heard Gus Erker one of the Aloes boys hissing it yesterday afternoon. It is rather on dealers in optical goods.

The World Against Him.

MILTON SILLS is sure of luck in "Framed" at the Liberty. A rascally Colonel the French army makes him scapegoat for a battle which French lost in the late war. This sends Milton off to Brazil. He finds himself in a diamond mine. The diamond king's daughter comes snooping around the level and you know what means in a movie. As is customary the bulkhead busts right in face and Milton has to save the day. The picture is a good one. It is strong with the boss, but the same Milt is accused of stealing diamonds and is sent to serve years in the fever-swept Amazon for diamond stealing. Brazil. By giving the real thing last drop of Castoria, or what it is men with yellow fever, for Milton wrings a confession from him and is free to go marry the mine owner's daughter. Apparently the other frame, the French army attack was gotten. At least this strain of frame had not been wiped out to the time by the charged rather thrumming and slow picture, but Brooke Johnson's stage show, with Peggy Breen as the bright particular star, is a real knockout.

Not So Fast, Either.

TOLSTOY's famous novel, "The Resurrection," which became a film, is a grand opera followed the natural course of events and turned into a comedy, as such, is an exhibition, at Loew's this week. It is a well acted, by the charming lores Del Rio, and if you are in search of fast entertainment may enjoy it, but it is several too long for the flapper show of their boy friends and it is terribly most of the way. ## Of Making Many Books

East and West

IN a recent number of the New York Times Magazine there appeared a very significant article by H. L. Duffus entitled "East and West: A Widening Cleavage." "For the third or fourth time since the Civil War," writes Mr. Duffus, "the Western farmer is on the warpath. Again he is seriously considering the immortal advice to raise less corn and more beef." The present protest is not merely the echo of an old one. The Middle West has grown in population, in wealth, in sophistication, in self-reliance, despite its temporary ups and downs. It has become self-conscious. It has evolved a sectional patriotism. Beyond all theory there is a real divergence between the East, which lives primarily by its machines, and the West, which still lives primarily by its land and weather. The farmer wrestling with nature has ideals different from those of the salesman wrestling with an unwilling purchaser, or an employee in a factory, giving a half turn to 2000 bolts a day.

While Mr. Duffus is concerned wholly with the economic and political antagonism that he shows to be inevitable between the manufacturing East and the agricultural Middle West, his thesis has more than economic and political significance. It would be no difficult matter to begin where Mr. Duffus ends and show how the economic domination of the East tends to discourage the development of an indigenous Middle Western culture—that is to say a distinctive American culture—for if we are ever to develop a recognizable American culture, it can scarcely be done in keeping with the fashions that prevail in polyglot New York.

It might be said that there is nothing to hinder any Middle Westerner in making a genuine contribution to American literature, if the ability be his. But this is not wholly true. Note the character of "successful" novels dealing with Middle Western life. Obviously they have not been written in keeping with the Middle Western consciousness. Their purpose has been to disparage, by way of flattering the Eastern urbane with his curious prejudices regarding life in "the cornbelt" and the "alfalfa regions." As a result the revealing literary picture of Middle Western life is a very faded caricature. The writers naturally wished to "succeed" and they went about it in the only possible way. In all other fields of literature the same force operates. An example of its operation was to be noted in the career of the late Stuart P. Sherman, a great American critic, certainly—while he was writing in Urbana.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Duffus is right in saying that the Middle West is becoming self-conscious and that it is evolving a sectional patriotism. Not until it shall have become self-conscious enough to render its own literary judgments in keeping with its own ideals can sincere writers of the Middle West hope to reach a large audience.

What we need is literary self-respect and some powerful medium for the expression of Middle Western—that is to say, distinctively American—literary opinion. As it is now, we are furnishing the East with many of its best writers. They leave us, for they wish to succeed. And when they leave us, they are remolded by forces that are antagonistic to the best in us.

BROTHER JOHN: A Tale of the First Franciscans. By Vida D. Scudder. (Little, Brown & Co.) "The purpose of this book," writes the author, "is to depict the ancient and stirring life of the sons of St. Francis in the period immediately following the death of the saint."

The central figure of the tale is a young Englishman, heir to a noble estate, who gives up fortune and title to follow Lady Fovarty.

THE MEN OF KILDONAN: By J. H. McCulloch. (Doran.) A stern and moving tale of the founding of the Selkirk settlement on Red River in Assiniboia.

ROMAN SUMMER: By Ludwig Lewisohn. (Harpers.) A young genius from the Middle West, whose boyhood has been warped by his relations with a too matter-of-fact mother, breaks away from his unsympathetic environment and goes to Rome, where he meets the inevitable girl, not, however, with the conventional romantic result.

GARDEN OF FLAMES: By E. S. Stevens. (Stokes.) Vera, living in England, learns that her husband, out in the fields of Persia, is in love with a beautiful and seductive lady by the name of Lydia. Leaving her frail daughter at home, Vera goes to Persia. By and by a gentleman, who is not a hussy, is overheard speaking in part as follows: "What I want isn't only your dear body but your dear mind—all of you—your very soul."

Thirty thousand people witnessed the De Koven performance from the reserved seat sections of the open-air theater, while 10,000 more were in the free sections. For the second week of the season, beginning tonight, the attraction will be Victor Herbert's operetta, "The Princess Pat," a work that is new to the Municipal Opera and which was presented but one time previously in St. Louis. The book was written by a St. Louisan, Henry Blossom.

SCHOOLS IN JOINT EXERCISES
202 Pupils Receive Diplomas And Hear Graduation Address by Archbishop Glennon.

Commencement exercises of the William Cullen McBride High school and Rosati-Kain High school were held jointly yesterday afternoon in the Cathedral, Newstead avenue and Lindell boulevard, with 133 graduates in the Rosati-Kain class and 69 from the McBride school. Archbishop Glennon presented diplomas and addressed the classes.

A scholarship to St. Louis University was awarded David F. Monahan Jr., of the McBride school, and scholarships to Fairbourn College were won by Miss Helen Diebels, Miss Catherine Dee, Miss Gertrude Kelly and Miss Helen O'Brien, of Rosati-Kain. Miss Ruth Bergfeld was awarded a 4-year scholarship to the University of Chicago. Two gold medals for essays on American history were given to Walter M. Whitely and Miss Florence Faller.

Real Speed.
Yesterday afternoon, little more than 24 hours after Col. Lindbergh landed in Washington, motion pictures of the event, the parade down Pennsylvania avenue and the pinning of the cross upon his breast by President Coolidge, were shown in all of the St. Louis first-run theaters.

EDWARDS REVUE AT ST. LOUIS
Dancing and Singing and Jed Dooley's Clowning Good.

Gus Edwards brought a well-balanced and entertaining summer revue to the St. Louis Theater yesterday afternoon introducing a new group of girls and boys who provide good music and splendid dancing. Jed Dooley, a headliner in his own right, clowning all over the place to the delight of all concerned.

Ray Baker, a lank, droll, dancing comic who "stopped to show" in two or three spots with his quaint comedy: Leota Lane, beautiful young girl of appearance the Reynolds Sisters, whose voices blend nicely; Jean Holly, a pretty little St. Louis violinist; Virginia Martin and a good handful of others help the fun and music along a lot.

Joe Schickel, Lya de Putti and Bob Edson are the film stars of the week's movie, "The Heart of a Lion," an appealing little story of a young man who is a little of a lion. Little peasant girl he wants to wed and the young fellow he really loves. It's well done, but one could manage to exist the week out without having seen it. ## TROUT STREAMS AT COOLIDGE'S DISPOSAL Brook and Rainbow Varieties Abound in Presidential Preserve in Black Hills.

STATE GAME LODGE, S. D., June 12.—President Coolidge is assured the privacy he desires on his vacation here through the designation of 12 miles of "the best fishing streams in the hills" for his sole use during his vacation at the Game Lodge in Custer State Park. Readily accessible to the summer White House, two miles of foothills, streams, abounding in brook or loach, trout, have been set aside, as have ten more miles high in the hills were the rainbow trout are plentiful.

"Ed" Rhoades, cattleman and former prospector, has donated the foothills course of Squaw Creek flowing through his property. These waters, together with others in the hills, have been patrolled by State game wardens and fishing prohibited since the last week in May.

C. B. "Pat" Adams, rancher, northwest of Custer, highest town in the Black Hills, has offered the streams through his lands, as have Leo Bender, Glenn Outman and J. M. Lynch. The Adams property, approximately 20 miles from the game lodge, noted for rainbow trout fishing, was set aside with a view providing for all day fishing trips.

In addition to these streams, characterized as "the finest trout streams in the Black Hills" by O. H. Johnson, State Director of Game and Fish, there is French Creek, in the park proper, celebrated for its rainbow and brook trout.

ATTENDANCE AND RECEIPTS AT OPERA EXCEED RECORDS
Attendance of 40,000 for Opening Week of Municipal Theater; "Princess Pat" Tonight.

The largest attendance and receipts record of any opening week in the history of Municipal Opera was established by the seven performances of "Robin Hood," ended last night.

Official figures show that more than 40,000 persons heard the De Koven opera, which is 5000 more than attended "Eileen," the opening attraction of last summer's season at the Municipal Theater, which up to last week was the largest initial week since Municipal Opera was started in 1919.

Thirty thousand people witnessed the De Koven performance from the reserved seat sections of the open-air theater, while 10,000 more were in the free sections. For the second week of the season, beginning tonight, the attraction will be Victor Herbert's operetta, "The Princess Pat," a work that is new to the Municipal Opera and which was presented but one time previously in St. Louis. "The early bird," observed Solomon, catches the worm." We do not know who said it, but when in doubt, Solomon, aphorisms or Shakespeare is a good guess. Besides, this is a fable. "But what about the worm?" inquired one of Solomon's children. We do not know if he did or not, but someone must have made that remark originally. Besides, children ask the most inconceivable questions. "The good die young, my son," answered Solomon. Moral: When in doubt, stick to platitudes.

Sir: It cost only $8 a quart, and as a result, I was somewhat suspicious. However, the friend I had invited to the opening has any number of tests for the genuineness of liquor. If one test does not work, he tries another, until he hits upon one that will justify drinking. Eagerly, he evades a bottle with the aid of a cork-screw. I tugged at the cork. Finally, he said, "That's good liquor." "How do you know?" I asked, as he had not applied any of his tests. "No bootlegger would bother to put a cork in that tight," was his edifying answer. The test was infallible. It was (past tense) good liquor.

MOSCOW, June 12.—M. Litvinoff, replying to the recent Polish note, which expressed regret for the assassination of M. Volkoff, soviet Minister at Warsaw, makes numerous demands in behalf of the soviet government.

The Polish Government is requested to take necessary measures to investigate fully the assassination of the envoy, all the ramifications of the plot leading thereto and to impose strict punishment on the guilty, especially the actual assassin.

The demand is made that M. Litvinoff, acting Charge d'Affaires at Warsaw, or other authorized member of the soviet, be permitted to witness the investigation. In the third place, Poland must take immediate and energetic measures to disperse terrorist organizations and persons in Polish territories whose activities are directed against the soviet and its representatives, and expel all such from the Polish republic.

Awaits Prompt Compliance.

M. Litvinoff declares that the soviet awaits immediate information relative to the fulfillment of these demands. The recent event, he adds, cannot be overcome by official declarations, but requires actual measures by Poland to put an end to such hostile activities. The note expresses gratitude for the friendly attitude of the Polish Government and people and declines to accept the compensation offered to the family of M. Volkoff. It rejects the Polish suggestion that the assassination was the act of a mad man, but asserts instead that it was due to harboring of soviet enemies on Polish soil.

It regretfully points out that notwithstanding many warnings, Poland has neglected to take the necessary measures to safeguard the soviet representatives. Despite assurances that Poland has never permitted terrorist activities, M. Litvinoff says the soviet has submitted and will submit data disproving this assertion.

Accuses Poland of Neglect.

It takes issue with the statement that the assassin is not a Polish citizen, and asserts that facilitating naturalization enables the enemies of the soviet to carry on under the protection of Polish citizenship. "Poland has neglected her duty," continues the note, "in not expelling persons known to be carrying on acts hostile to the soviet union, which knew long ago that hostile organizations were actually planning the murder of the soviet representatives."

by the council of the Tirana pact, and to avoid a quarrel with Italy within the ranks of the council the governments of Europe have been striving to put the relations between Rome and Belgrade on a friendly basis.

As Belgrade admitted that the dragoman incident does not fall within Article XII of the covenant as a serious difference justifying council intervention, the members of the council probably will endeavor to keep the Albanian problem off the agenda, because of the possibility of dangerous consequences with Italy.

The Polish delegation declared that Moscow's communication concerning the assassination of the soviet envoy Volkoff would cause no new difficulties; indeed, they seem to consider the Polish-Russian affair as liquidated.

The Associated Press correspondent that Moscow's demands either had or will be fulfilled.

Anglo-Russian Relations.

In the meantime Anglo-Russian relations are causing deep concern, and it is understood that the countries of the little entente who have not yet established diplomatic relations with the soviet are marking time, watching both Anglo-Russian and Polish-Russian relations before adopting a political attitude toward Russia.

The Germans seem anxious to avoid any extension of the difficulties between Europe and Moscow. Their main interest at Geneva this time is declared to be to receive a promise from France and Belgium to reduce the troops of occupation in the Rhineland.

It is understood that Dr. Stresemann will point out to the French Foreign Minister that Germany's peace policy, her adherence to the League and fulfillment of the conditions of the Treaty of Versailles

"The Spirit of St. Louis"

In commemoration of one of the most gallant adventures in history, in appreciation of the spirit and faith of the great city which made it possible, two famous Pennsylvania trains, "The St. Louisan" and "The New Yorker," have been renamed the "Spirit of St. Louis."

A HIGHWAY which becomes a main artery in a city's life—a public library around which the lives of thousands grow richer—a public square which becomes the playground of the masses—

Something that is constantly in the minds of the people because it plays an important part in their lives—what more effective monument can there be to commemorate a great deed or a heroic man?

Every day for almost twenty years the two famous Pennsylvania trains "The St. Louisan" and "The New Yorker" have speeded over the broad steel highway that links together the business and social life of St. Louis and the great South-West with the Atlantic seaboard.

These trains eastbound and westbound will henceforth seek more effectively than ever to express the "Spirit of St. Louis."

It is thus that the Pennsylvania Railroad wishes to make its contribution to the perpetuation of the memory of Charles Lindbergh and the new chapter he has written in the history of transportation.

FOR Stomach Acid PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

Better Than Soda
For fifty years genuine "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this scouring waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

Try a 25c Bottle

The BILLIONAREA

~the Greater St. Louis Market

An Actual Market

A Rich Market

An Economical Market

A Volume Market

A Reached Market

The Billionarea is the Greater St. Louis market as it actually exists and as officially designated by the Audit Bureau of Circulations. Its boundary is simply the physical limits of metropolitan St. Louis on both the Missouri and Illinois sides of the Mississippi. It includes all (and only) that area where concentration of People, Dollars and Coverage (P+D+C) offers a volume market at low cost for advertisers.

Consider All Five Factors that make The Billionarea such an attractive market

1. The actual existing Greater St. Louis market.

There is nothing mythical or artificial about The Billionarea. It is real! It is physical! Any salesman can see with his own eyes when he gets into The Billionarea and when he reaches the sparsely settled country districts beyond. The Billionarea includes all of the concentrated population in metropolitan St. Louis—the Greater St. Louis Market on both the Missouri and Illinois sides of the Mississippi River.

2. One of America's greatest volume-consuming markets.

With a population of more than a million, The Billionarea is one of the greatest volume consuming markets in America for practically any product—a market so great in size that it offers a volume outlet for a large part of the production of any factory.

3. One of the richest markets in America.

The people in The Billionarea earn and spend more than a Billion Dollars a year, making it one of the richest and most prosperous markets in America, and giving it a far higher purchasing power per family than the average of other metropolitan markets.

In addition, The Billionarea is in a remarkable era of business development with a billion dollar building program in process and an industrial development of tremendous proportions.

4. A compact market economically reached and sold.

The Billionarea is only 16 miles by 21 miles. It can be traversed by automobile in 45 to 60 minutes. Population is concentrated in The Billionarea to an average of more than 6,600 to the square mile. Retail stores are feet and minutes apart, not hours and miles. With its great population concentrated in a small area, The Billionarea offers an unusual opportunity for volume-selling at low cost.

5. One of the greatest market opportunities in America.

The Billionarea has one newspaper that reaches almost every home of purchasing consequence, at a lower advertising cost than is possible in most other major markets.

That newspaper is the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, having by far the greatest circulation in The Billionarea and carrying more local, national and classified advertising combined than the second and third newspapers added together.

POLITICIANS DISCUSS LINDBERGH'S FUTURE

Too Young for Presidency, but Aviation May Lead Him to Congress.

By DAVID LAWRENCE, A Special Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch. (Copyright, 1927.)
WASHINGTON, June 13.—Standing beside his father at the parade, a little boy asked: "Do you suppose they will ever make Lindbergh President?" "Why should they?" was the father's counter question. "Because he has done a great deed," answered the boy.
Others who overheard the conversation wondered, too, what the future might have in store for Col. Lindbergh. He is only 25 years old and the Constitution requires that Presidents shall be at least 35. So the question really is: What have the next 10 years in store for the air man and is fame everlasting or ephemeral?

So far as common sense and good taste are concerned, young Lindbergh has the two fundamental qualities which have appealed to the imagination of the American people in selecting their Chief Executive. He has a good education and a firmness of purpose which would enable him to make it possible for him to study government as well as aviation. It is quite possible that he might be urged to run for the House of Representatives as the age qualification is only 25. For the Senate he would have to be 30. If he went to the House, he would be following in the footsteps of his father. As for the political views of the father, however, he was always counted a radical. He staunchly voted against American entry into the war—an act which at the time probably required a good deal more courage than to go with the crowd in favor of the war.

Young Lindbergh's thoughts today are away from politics, but if he sincerely believed that his presence in the House might aid the cause of aviation, then it is conceivable that he will eventually give it thought. His primary interests are in aviation.
The welcome given him is so astounding that it is natural for political Washington to wonder if there is a political future ahead for the young aviator. Certainly the reception given him differs from that ever accorded any living man for it is given by the cause of all political parties. It is as nearly a unanimous expression of approval as ever has been extended to a single individual.
Does fame last? It depends upon the behavior of the hero. But in politics a reputation gained in youth frequently remains for many years afterward. Men who made splendid war records 10 years ago now are coming into their own in politics. The boys and girls who applaud Lindbergh today will 10 years hence constitute the bulk of the voting population. Lindbergh is their hero—the generation of tomorrow holds his political future in their custody.

LINCOLN AND LEE UNIVERSITY BUILDING SITE DEDICATED

By the Associated Press.
KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 13.—The 261 acres composing the campus of Lincoln and Lee University, nonsectarian institution, were dedicated yesterday.
Standing on the porch of a building that is to be the first dormitory of the university, Gov. Sam A. Baker of Missouri and former Gov. Henry J. Allen of Kansas, addressed the gathering on the spot where, in the Battle of Westport, the forces of Lincoln and of Lee struggled in 1864. The ground lies partly in each State.

"These acres in Missouri and Kansas, put to the use of higher learning, will help to destroy pessimism and intolerance," Baker declared. "Kansas City has long been known as a meat center. Allen said. "Today that title will be forgotten. This city is rounding out her accomplishments and is to become the cultural center of the Middle West."
In five months $1,500,000 has been raised for establishing the university, Henry L. McCune said. Bishop E. L. Waldorf of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, dedicated the grounds.

Flyer Admired by World, Says Australian Industrial Envoy.
By the Associated Press.
PITTSBURGH, Pa., June 13.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has "won a place in the respect of our people equal to that of the late Sir Ross Smith. Australia's greatest aviator and the first man to fly from Australia to England," said R. J. Murphy, secretary to the Australian Industrial Delegation, upon his arrival here last night.
"Col. Lindbergh is the type of hero whose deeds are admired throughout the rest of the world as much as in his own country," Murphy said. The delegation of 11 persons plans to spend the next three days inspecting Pittsburgh's industrial plants.

ELECTRICITY INCREASES CROP 20 PER CENT, REPORT DECLARES

Researchers State Result of Work on Farm of Henry Surber of Warrenton, Mo.
By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, June 13.—A 20 per cent increase in the yield of farm lands has been obtained through the use of atmospheric electricity as a stimulant to crops, says a report made by a committee of the American Electronic Research Association.
Observations are being made on the farm of Henry Surber of Warrenton, Mo., one of the first to claim an increase in crops from applying electric stimulant. The method also is being used to cure cancerous vegetable growths.
The method used in merely discharging electricity through the ground at the roots of the plants, using wires and a device which catches the electric currents from the air. It is widely used in France with success, the report stated.

PROPOSE MONUMENT TO COL. LINDBERGH

Will Be Discussed Tonight—Roosevelt Field May Be So Dedicated.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, June 13.—Plans for a permanent monument to Col. Lindbergh, to be erected at Roosevelt Field, Garden City, L. I., will be discussed by a committee of leading citizens of Long Island in the Garden City Hotel this evening.
District Attorney Edwards of Nassau County is chairman of the committee. Among those attending will be Representative Robert L. Bacon, Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of War Davison and Col. Benjamin H. Fenwick, Commander of Mitchell Field.
A 28-day option on Roosevelt Field has been obtained from the army company controlling the field, and the field itself may be dedicated as a monument to Lindbergh and his achievement, Edwards said.

TWO BOATS COLLIDE IN RIVER WHILE WAITING FOR LINDBERGH

Passengers on Crowded New York Ferries are Shaken, But None Is Injured.

NEW YORK, June 13.—The municipal ferry boats Bronx and Julius Miller collided in the Hudson River, off the Battery, this morning. Both vessels were filled with crowds for the Lindbergh reception.

The damage to the Miller was found to be less than at first thought. Both boats were able to remain in service.

2 Flyers Injured in 100-Ft. Drop.
NILES, O., June 13.—Skillful navigation saved the lives of two aviators from Selfridge Field, Michigan, when the motor of an army plane they were flying from Youngstown, O., to Selfridge Field stalled 100 feet in the air. The airplane was badly damaged in a forced landing here. Lieut. E. Erickson, pilot, was accompanied by Lieut. Jack Wolfe. Neither was injured.

Another plan calls for erection of illuminated shafts at the corners of the field and an additional lighthouse to guide aviators at night.

REPORT TO LEAGUE ON INTERNATIONAL VICE CONDITIONS

Body of Experts Finds
There Is a Considerable Traffic Carried On by Women and Girls.

INQUIRY MADE IN MANY COUNTRIES

Several Nations Said to Have Neither Signed Nor Adhered to Conventions for Suppression.

An international traffic in women and girls has considerable dimensions, it is declared in the recently completed report to the League of Nations of the League's special body of experts which investigated conditions. Copies of the report have been received by the Missouri Social Hygiene Association.

The inquiry, extending into numerous countries of Europe, the Americas and the Mediterranean shore of Africa, was undertaken at the suggestion of Miss Grace Abbott, head of the Children's Bureau of the American Government.

Complete figures are not available on the extent of the traffic, the report says, adding: "Many hundreds of women and girls—some of them very young—are transported each year from one country to another."

Still a Serious Problem.

"Many of these, but by no means all," the report goes on, "were fallen in their own country, but nearly always there was evidence that their movements were controlled by others, and many of them could not have realized the sort of life to which they would be subjected. The statements made to our investigators by members of the underworld agree on the point that there is a constant stream of foreign women proceeding to certain countries. Whether the volume is less than it used to be is a question difficult to answer, but on the whole we are disposed to think that the stricter measures taken by governments, especially in regard to immigration have produced a marked effect both in the extent and character of the traffic. The numbers known are sufficiently large to constitute a serious problem."

Among causes given for the demand for foreign women are surpluses in some places due to natural or artificial causes, of men over women and movement of troops, ships and tourists.

Sources of supply are given as follows: Habitual delinquents, occasional or "complicit" delinquents; singers, actresses and dancers who are forced to go astray, and innocent girls who are tricked into fake marriages.

Main Routes of Traffic.
Main routes of the traffic disclosed by the investigation, as far as it went, the report says, "appear to be from Europe, particularly Austria, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Italy, Poland, Rumania, Spain and Turkey, to South and Central America, particularly Argentina, Brazil, Mexico, Panama and Uruguay, and to Egypt and other places in North Africa." Bogus documents of all sorts are employed by the traffickers.

"Co-operation between Governments for the purpose of preventing this traffic," the report states, "began in 1902, after many years of voluntary international effort and national Government activity. The area of international action has been considerably widened since the League of Nations undertook the general supervision of these matters, but there still are many states outside this international movement. The administrative measures required by the agreement of 1904 (as extended by the convention of 1921) include the appointment in each country of central authorities charged with the duty of co-ordinating information relative to the traffic and of corresponding with one another; the watching of ports and railway stations; the repatriation of women; the supervision of employment agencies; and the protection of women and children traveling on emigrant ships."

"A great deal has been done by Governments in pursuance of provisions to check the traffic, but we have drawn attention to several points where the action taken on the legislation provided appears to fall below the standard prescribed. The work of voluntary societies who were pioneers in the movement for the suppression of the traffic has proved of the greatest value."

Changed Attitude Noted.

The report notes a changed attitude in many countries towards commercialized vice, saying: "Much of the responsibility for the traffic is due to past indifference of public opinion and to ignorance of the tragedies resulting from the traffic and its disgraceful exploitation of victims." Influences which lift the mind to higher planes and healthful recreation are urged as offsets. "It is obvious," the report concludes, "that there is no single or simple means of suppressing the traffic. An exact knowledge of the facts, active supervision and the application of suitable laws and measures of protection are all necessary."

essary elements in the campaign against the traffic; the latter, however, must be treated as an epidemic and must be continually fought in its endemic centers; that is, in the countries of origin; it must be arrested at the frontiers and mercilessly suppressed when it succeeds in crossing them and penetrating into the countries where a demand exists. No one measure is sufficient in itself; the only effective means is to combine all measures and to adapt them to the situation in each individual country. The traffic, being as it is of an international character, requires concerted international action.

"Experience has shown that, when measures of supervision and protection are strictly enforced, traffickers disappear or become exceedingly cautious. Experience also has shown, however, that such efforts are rendered fruitless if a neighboring country fails to exercise the same supervision; traffickers immediately transfer to the country the scene of their operations in connection with the dispatch and reception of women."

Progress of Suppression.
"We hope that the League of Nations will continue its work of increasing the area of the international movement for the suppression of the traffic. There still are many countries which have neither signed nor adhered to the conventions, and some have failed to ratify their signatures. Evidence was placed before us that, even in countries which are parties to the conventions, the legislation or its administration is not always up to the standard required."

The report points out that a vital blow at the situation can be struck by eliminating the profits for intermediaries.

HERE IS THE REASON SICK FOLKS ARE INVITED TO ENJOY TREATMENTS FREE of CHARGE

WITH THIS NEW HEALTH APPLIANCE—

Rare, and especially pleasing to sick people, is the policy of the sponsors of the New Highway to Health, the I-ON-A-CO. It is against the rules of this organization to solicit or sell to any individual who is not thoroughly satisfied that the appliance is beneficial in his or her particular case.

Instead of getting your money first, this organization offers you the opportunity of trying the appliance at any of the nine Health Service rooms, maintained for your convenience in various parts of the city. Come to any of them and permit the attendant who serves you to explain the theory of the I-ON-A-CO and show you how it works. Take a treatment free of charge, and see how delightful it is. After one of several of the free treatments have proved the usefulness of this marvelous appliance, you will be given the opportunity to buy—but not otherwise.

Consultation

Every person who calls at any of the nine Health Service rooms is welcomed cordially, the theory and application of the I-ON-A-CO is fully explained, and the Free Treatment is given according to individual needs. This service is of inestimable value, for it insures every person getting maximum results from the treatment.

Convenience

The I-ON-A-CO treatment is notable for its convenience and ease. There are no drugs, no medicine, no herbs, no shocks of any kind. The patient is seated comfortably in a chair, the padded ring of I-ON-A-CO is placed around the waist, over the shoulder, or wherever is most suitable, and the patient simply relaxes while the powerful magnetism generated by I-ON-A-CO does its work. Since magnetism will even penetrate glass or porcelain, it works readily through clothing, hence it is unnecessary for the patient to disrobe.

A St. Louisan

The Iona Company of Missouri, 230 Paul Brown Bldg.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sirs:

Two weeks ago, Friday, I purchased an IONACO. My trouble was High Blood Pressure, and the joints of my right hand were so stiff that it was difficult to open and close my hand. I had such severe pains in my arm and shoulder that I could not sleep; and was also troubled with a cough in the morning. I sleep all night and do not cough any more.

My husband had pains in the right side of his back and the doctor said it was a soreness in his right kidney. From one a. m. until time to arise he was unable to sleep and on first getting up he would have to hold onto a chair before he could walk. He has been troubled this way for nine months.

We have been using the IONACO about three weeks and we are both having wonderful relief. I will be glad to let anyone know what IONACO has done for us, and you are at liberty to use this letter as you see fit.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Rosa Kuzdas

Advice

The Health Service Department is available to all I-ON-A-CO owners or users who would like advice on health, diet and hygienic measures. You are urged to take advantage of the facilities of this department, through any of the treatment rooms which are convenient to your home. Remember, when you call at any of the nine Health Service and Treatment Rooms, a free treatment is given you.

Servicing at Home

Many of the people who were at one time too ill to come to one of the Health Service rooms owe their renewed health to the Iona expert who calls at the home of sick people and demonstrates the I-ON-A-CO. If you personally cannot come in, telephone and we will have someone come to your home at once. You will be given the same careful, kindly attention as though you came to the office. Only a phone call to any of the Health Treatment rooms may bring you health. Phone today or send the coupon.

STATE WITNESS VANISHES; 5 FREED IN $14,000 HOLDUP

One of Defendants in Robbery of Bank Messengers Re-arrested on Charge of Carrying Weapon.

The disappearance of a State witness today forced a general continuance of the case of five men, indicted for the $14,000 holdup of two messengers of the Union-Easton Trust Co. last June 22. This means that the men will not be prosecuted unless the witness is found.

The men are James Michaels, Joseph Simon, Frank Sluby, Joseph Otto Harper and Howard Bialasell. They were indicted after Gus Josephs, an admitted participant in the robbery, turned State's evidence. As has been noted previously, Josephs has moved from his former address and cannot be found.

Josephs was a waiter for another defendant, George Dours, a restaurant proprietor. The State intends to prosecute Dours, as other witnesses have implicated him.

As Simon and his four co-defendants were discharged, Simon was re-arrested on a charge of carrying concealed weapons. It is understood the charge was made to hold him in custody, as the Missouri Supreme Court recently affirmed a parental attitude toward her. Last September that he told her he no longer loved her and would leave her if she did not leave him. She left him to visit her mother in California, returning here last month. She has since met Capen once on the street and spoken to him, she added.

CAPEN'S FOURTH WIFE WINS DIVORCE AND $125 A MONTH

She Waives Claim on His Real Estate; Alleged General Indignities.

Mrs. Marian Morefield Capen today was granted a divorce from Wallace C. Capen, former automobile dealer. She will receive $125 a month alimony. An agreement whereby she waives any claim on real estate owned by Capen was filed.

Her divorce petition, filed last Thursday, alleged general indignities. She testified that Capen had a dictatorial disposition and assumed a parental attitude toward her. Last September that he told her he no longer loved her and would leave her if she did not leave him. She left him to visit her mother in California, returning here last month. She has since met Capen once on the street and spoken to him, she added.

Capen did not contest. Mrs. Marian Morefield Capen was his fourth wife, having been his stenographer. Each marriage resulted in divorce.

MERAMEC TRUST'S FINAL ASSETS SOLD FOR $1355

Valued at $48,000, List of 97 Items Are Auctioned to Frank Lee, Attorney.

Remaining assets of the Meramec Trust Co., which failed in 1919, were sold at auction at the Courthouse today for $1355. A valuation of $48,000 had been placed on the 97 items sold. It was announced by E. H. Benoist, liquidating officer for the State Finance Commission, who supervised the sale. Frank Lee, an attorney, was the successful bidder.

Claims against the bank's assets aggregating $500,000, representing primarily amounts 2000 depositors had in the bank, have been paid thus far on the basis of about 50 cents on the dollar. Another payment of about 2 1/2 per cent will be made, Benoist believes.

In the assets sold today mainly were notes and judgments on notes which the bank heretofore had failed to collect.

MAY-STERM UPHELD IN FIGHT AGAINST TAX

Court Rules Its $61,500 Assessment for Olive Street Widening Is Too High.

The exception of the May-Sterm Furniture Co. to an assessment of $61,500 in taxes against its property on the southeast corner of Twelfth boulevard and Olive street for the Olive street widening project was sustained today by Circuit Judge Calhoun.

In making the order the Court agreed with the contention of the firm that the assessment, at the rate of $500 a foot, was too high. Adjoining property on Twelfth boulevard is taxed at $150 a foot. To make a new assessment, Judge Calhoun appointed E. A. Bokern, F. X. Hiemenz and Albert T. Terry as special commissioners.

The furniture company contends its assessment should not be more than $25,000. The city, in a separate exception, contended it should be $125,000, but the exception was overruled.

JUDGE DENIES SUIT ON LIEN

Dry Goods Stockholders' Claim on Railway Exchange Loses.

A demurrer to a petition alleging that a prior lien of $2,750,000 on the Railway Exchange Building should be placed to the credit of stockholders of the defunct Hargadine-McKittick Dry Goods Co. was sustained by Circuit Judge Hartmann today. It was pointed out that the statute of limitations had expired on such possible claims several years ago.

Two previous petitions likewise have been thrown out of court, amended petitions having then been filed by the plaintiffs.

Zane Grey's Yacht Stranded.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 12.—The Fisherman, a yacht owned by Zane Grey, the author, struck rock in the South Sea Islands, 3500 miles southwest of San Francisco Saturday, a message picked up by an amateur radio operator says. The message said the weather was calm and indicated Fisherman would be refueled soon.

YOUTHS FROM ARKANSAS HELD ON BURGLARY CHARGES

Police Find Loot Valued at $1000, Stolen, Three Prisoners Say, in Illinois.

Three 18-year-old youths, who left their homes in Piggott, Ark., a month ago and came to St. Louis, are being held today by police on several charges of burglary. They were arrested at Thirteenth street and Franklin avenue last night, as they were trying to start a small roadster, the motor of which had been damaged by the rain.

In the room they occupied at 1222 Franklin, police recovered cosmetics, shirts, handbags and other loot, valued at $1000, which the youth admitted, police said, having stolen from stores in Columbia and Dupon, Ill.

The youths identified themselves as Harry Schmidt, Frank Harris and Clifford Land.

Com- merce in the Air

Arthur Brisbane, in the Chicago Herald and Examiner of May 18, says, "Standard Oil of Indiana announced yesterday the purchase from Henry and Edsel Ford of a huge, all-metal, three-engine monoplane 'to provide safe, fast and comfortable trips' for its officials to outlying oil regions."

"The time of a good oil man is worth more than the price of several airplanes."

"Perhaps Standard Oil will contribute to American flying on its own account, and build that 'real flying machine' which Henry Ford suggests."

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has been, and is, contributing to American flying in the interest of the people whom it serves by the development of special gasoline and lubricating oil for aviation use and by its program of marking air trails.

This Company is interested in commercial aviation. It has proved in its own business that the air is an extraordinarily satisfactory medium of communication.

The Air Mail has been a tremendous asset to the Standard Oil Company (Indiana), increasing the efficiency of the organization. Other business concerns and individuals throughout the United States have appreciated this speedier mail communication it makes possible, as the record for 1926 testifies. A total of 17,345,960 letters were carried by airplane during the year.

This Company's investment in a giant monoplane is further evidence that the Company is deeply interested in commercial aviation.

The new all-metal monoplane, named the Stanolind, can accommodate eight passengers, has a wing span of 71 feet, and is propelled by three motors. It uses 46 gallons of gasoline an hour and carries fuel for a sustained flight of five hours.

The Stanolind was purchased to provide safe, fast and comfortable transportation to oil producing regions, division headquarters and outlying refineries.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is always on the alert for new ways and better methods of increasing efficiency. The purchase of the new monoplane is in line with its progressive business policy.

Profit in Reserves Shown in Associated Banks' Report Raises Question of Possibility of Hardening
in Rates.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 12.—The most important consideration in the financial situation, Saturday's report of the Associated Banks shows a similar condition in the preceding week.

Reserves over the holiday were $1.1 billion, or 4 1/2 per cent of the total assets. It will be interesting to see whether the present deficit in reserves results in any hardening of rates on Tuesday.

A section of the speculative community persists in the belief that there will be reduction in the discount rate, if not this week, very soon. Banking opinion does not support this view. With money hardening in all important European centers and with all the talk of business for credit abundance supplied, it is hard to see how a cut in the rate now and might easily lead to extravagant speculation. However in the absence of trade developments of importance, speculation for the rise in rates almost exclusively on the way or the other in that respect will doubtless be reflected in the market.

Much attention will be paid to efforts to remedy the congestion in the market for new bonds. So far the over supply has had no effect upon trading in stocks.

MONEY SITUATION S REVIEWED WITH MARKETS CLOSED

Profit in Reserves Shown in Associated Banks' Report Raises Question of Possibility of Hardening
in Rates.

NEW YORK, June 13.—The most important consideration in the financial markets is still the money situation. Saturday's report of the Associated Banks shows a similar condition in the preceding week.

Loans over the holiday were about 4 per cent for new accommodations and at 4 1/2 per cent for renewals. It will be interesting to see whether the present decline in reserves results in any hardening of rates on Tuesday.

A section of the speculative community persists in the belief that the market for new bonds will be reduced in the resultant rate, if not this week, very soon. Banking opinion does not support this view. With money hardening in all important European centers and with all the resources of business for credit abundantly supplied, it is hard to see that good purpose would be served by a cut in the rate now and might easily lead to extravagant speculation. However, in the absence of developments in the market, speculation for the rise is founded almost exclusively on the easy money and any change in the market for new bonds will undoubtedly be reflected in the market.

Much attention will be paid to the efforts to remedy the congestion in the market for new bonds and whether the supply has had no effect upon trading in the market.

BRITISH INDUSTRIAL AND TRADE REVIEW

By FRANCIS W. HIRST.
Former Editor of the London
Financial Times.

LONDON, June 13.—The week's bank return shows a lower gold stock and a lower foreign currency reserve, but there were more commodities in the bank's hands.
Consequently the ratio stands at 40 per cent. Nevertheless further solid withdrawals must be made to maintain the ratio of 40 per cent. The bank's policy of maintaining the ratio of 40 per cent is a sound one, and the bank's policy of maintaining the ratio of 40 per cent is a sound one.

The French situation is ex-

MEDITATIONS —OF A— MARRIED WOMAN

By HELEN ROWLAND

WHY DOCTORS GROW RICH. The luckiest—and saddest—day of my life, was that on which my specialist raised his price per office-call to ten dollars, and I decided to get WELL!

He was a good specialist, and undoubtedly had made a better and a thinner woman of me. But under his sympathetic influence, I had developed "Symptomana" and a chronic case of "feeling SORRY for myself."

No day was complete without its cloistered hour in the doctor's office, TALKING about myself! I used to drop in, sometimes, just to tell him how WELL I felt!

That is the secret of a doctor's success; to be able to start a woman talking about herself, and then to sit and listen raptly and sympathetically, until she gets the last complex out of her system.

Lots of good physicians have built Park Avenue apartment-houses on the knowledge of this bit of feminine psychology. And, heaven knows, they have earned them!

Any woman who can afford a doctor, a lawyer and a psychoanalyst should be perfectly happy, free from inhibitions and filled with sweetness and light.

Any husband who can afford to pay these specialists to listen to his wife's soul-problems by the hour should have a peaceful home-life and a free mind for his business.

A woman simply MUST have somebody to whom she can talk about herself! There is no mental medicine like telling somebody how you suffer! It is far more stimulating than radium, gland-pills, or blood transfusion!

But, alas, as a repository for a wife's symptoms and sufferings, a husband is less than nothing. He has no SOUL! From the day he marries his spiritual nature begins to be buried under his appetite or his neuritis or his business worries, or his golf-complex.

The minute you begin telling him how your head or your heart or your conscience is hurting you, he runs for the aspirin, the smelling salts or the bi-carbonate of soda; or else he dashes out to the Club, or suddenly recalls a business appointment or calls up the DOCTOR! The sly dog!

A man simply cannot bear watching his wife "suffer" all over the living room furniture, when he wants to read his newspaper or figure up his accounts.

But a woman always has SOMETHING the matter with her—either germs or nerves, or too much weight, or a soul-problem, or a servant-girl complex!

The Spotted Stranger Is Caught

Of one thing you may be quite sure:
One ne'er can tell when he's secure.

—Sammy Jay.

THAT was a day never to be forgotten in the Green Forest—the day that the stranger was hunted to a cave in a ledge deep in the Green Forest. Never had any of the little Green Forest people seen so many hunters together at one time; never had they been so filled with fear; and the worst of it was they had no means of knowing what was all about. They couldn't understand it. It was Sammy Jay who first began to get an idea of what was going on. You see, it was Sammy who first saw the stranger. It was Sammy who saw the stranger go into the little cave in the ledge; and it was Sammy who did his best to tell the hunters all about it by screaming at the top of his lungs.

Sammy watched Farmer Brown's Boy, Farmer Brown and all the hunters gather around the entrance to the little cave where the stranger was hidden, and how he did wish he could understand what they were saying. But he couldn't. All he could do was to remain where he could watch all that took place. After awhile some of the hunters disappeared, the rest remaining. Those that left were gone a long time. By and by Sammy heard the hunters coming back. He heard the sound of wheels and horses. He flew over to where he could look down an old wood road. A pair of horses were coming up the old wood road drawing a cage on wheels. It was a cage that could be taken off; it was a cage made of big iron bars. It was brought as near as possible on the old wood road and then it was hauled across and finally put in position in front of that little cave. The end toward the cave was open, so fixed that it could be dropped instantly.

Sammy was so excited that he just had to scream now and then. Blacky the Crow, watched. Blacky's eyes are so sharp that he can see clearly all that is going on at a distance. So from the top of a tree, where he felt quite safe, Blacky watched. Tommy Tit the Chickadee also watched, for Tommy isn't afraid of anybody. From high up overhead of Mistah Buzzard, circling around and around, looked down with those marvelous eyes of his and didn't miss a thing. But these were the only ones of the forest folk who saw what went

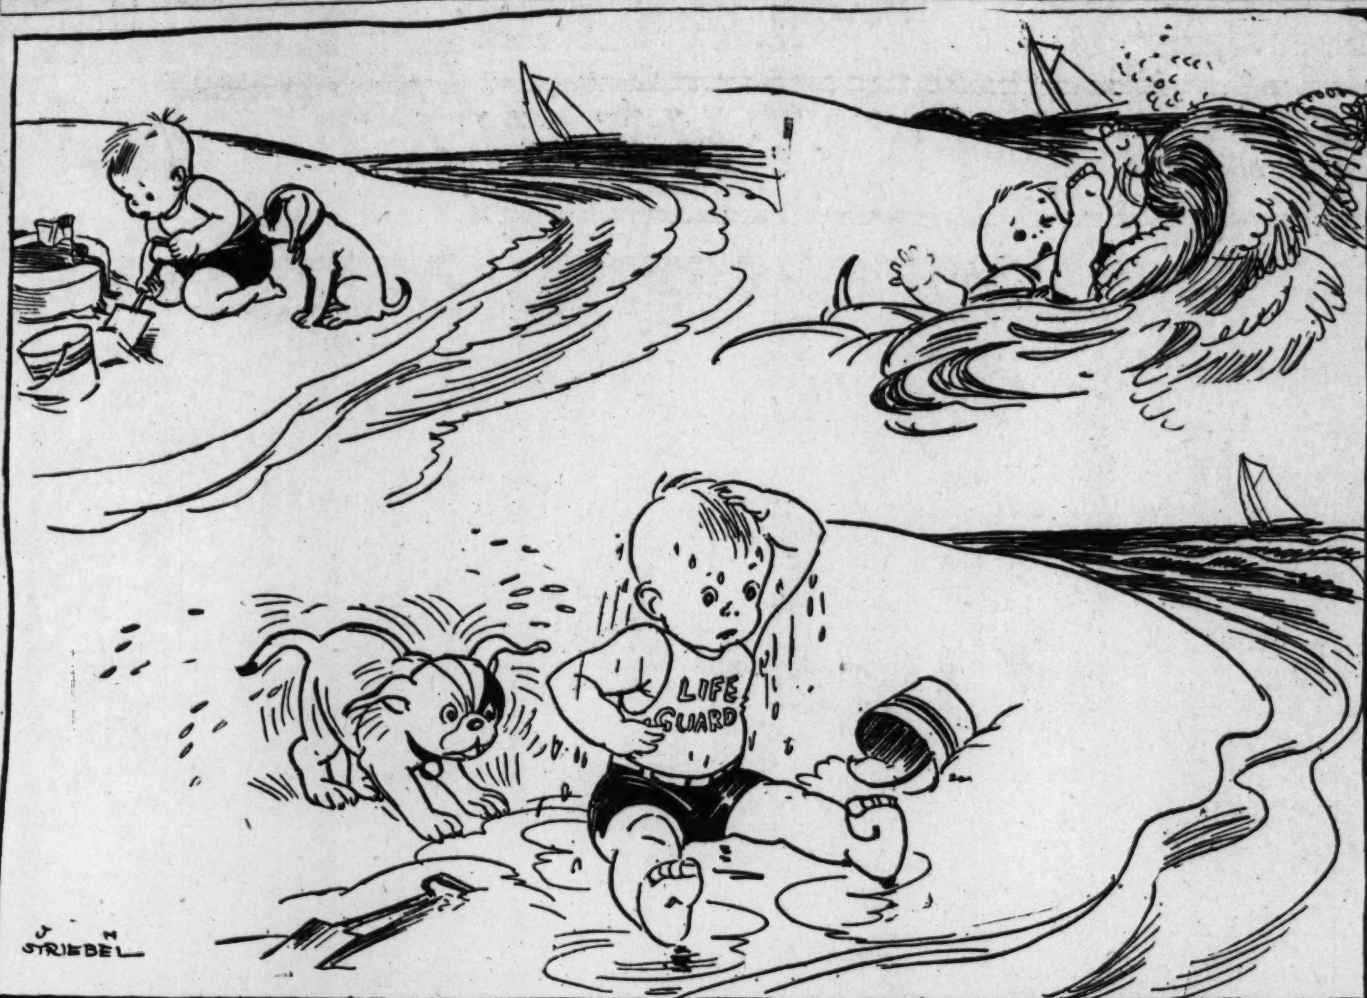

All he could do was to remain where he could watch all that took place on there at the ledge deep in the Green Forest. Finally all but two of the hunters and Farmer Brown's Boy left the Green Forest. These two hunters and Farmer Brown's Boy remained hidden. They took very great care to hide where they could not be seen from the little cave in the ledge, and where the wind would not take the scent of them there.

All became as quiet as it had previously been noisy. Jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun started down for the Purple Hills. Lower and lower he sank toward those Purple Hills, behind which he would go to bed. The Black Shadows came creeping through the Green Forest. Sammy Jay and Blacky the Crow and Tommy Tit and Old Mr. Buzzard could no longer keep watch. You see, they cannot see in the darkness as can Hooty the Owl. So it was Hooty who took their place, and he was quite as curious as they had been.

ALL IN A BABY'S LIFE • Another Flood Disaster • By John H. Striebel

A wise man might find in this adventure some moral about the house built upon the sand, but Baby finds in it only outraged dignity. Just when his architectural masterpiece was completed, much to his satisfaction and the admiration of his puppy, along come the great Forces of Nature and wipe it all out.

But this baby has the dauntless spirit that conquers all, and a new structure will soon rise upon the ruins of the old.

Milton Work's Bridge Pointers

THE pointer for today is: Ability to answer a partner's Informatory double properly is most essential to partnership success.

How the partner of an Informatory doubler should answer when the intervening adversary passes, will be the subject of this week's questions and answers. Many who know when to make an Informatory double do not know how to answer one.

Beginning today and continuing daily until Friday, hands will be given in which Dealer bids, Second Hand doubles and Third Hand passes. The resultant problem will be: What should Fourth Hand declare in answer to partner's Informatory double? Four hands per day, 20 in all, will be given. There will be a daily answer slip, and beginning tomorrow the answers to the questions of the previous day will appear with full explanation.

I urge you all to compete in this contest. Write in pencil now on the answer slip at the end of this article the declaration you would make in hands 1 to 4. Tomorrow compare your answers with mine and note whether we agree. Do this each day this week and see how near you can get to a perfect score of 20. Induce the bridge-playing members of your family and your friends to start today and see who has the best score at the end of the week. No bridge contest could be more interesting or instructive than this.

This week's hands are held by East. South is the dealer who bids and West the partner who doubles. Informatorily. North always passes. New hands every day.

Today's Hands. West double. North pass; what should East declare, holding:

Don't Always Thwart Your Children

By CHARLES A. L. REED, M. D.,
Former President of the American Medical Association.

YOUR child has the power instinct. It wishes to have the power to do the things it sees you do. It's unconscious ambition is to do the things it sees the bigger children do.

This is a most valuable instinct. Do not try to suppress it. The results of suppression of the power instinct in children are many and far reaching.

The child who suffers most is the one we see mother desires passionately to bring it up as nearly perfect as possible. It is usually a girl. After being wrapped up when she is taken out and unwrapped when she comes in for nine or ten years; after having every effort of self-determination checked and every action commented on; after having been consistently told how what she may read, what she must think and what she must say in her prayers, the unfortunate child has either lost all capacity for initiative and become a nonentity, or else has become an obstinate little rebel.

Many children like this, when they first go to school are obedient and cantankerous. If, however, the atmosphere of the school is good and the girl gets an opportunity for a little self-expression she usually falls into line with other children, and so enjoys her freedom, that she regards school as heaven and home a hell.

The devoted parent naturally is profoundly hurt at the child's ingratitude and want of natural affection. It does not often occur to this affectionate but unintelligent mother that the real trouble is her own lack of common sense.

Most children, even those of wise parents, pass in adolescence through a phase of hating home.

The awakening of the sexual instinct accentuates their normal love for home and desire for independence.

The school, besides providing a multitude and variety of problems in work, play, adaptation to school-

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

You and I.

SOME people think that wisdom spells a grim and dismal look, a face that sees no loveliness in spring time's greenest nook, an eye that's ever seeking for some knowledge vast, profound, yet fails to glimpse the joyous truth that rings the whole world round. But you and I see clearer, dear, we know that wisdom lies in watching sudden sun and rain that fall from Maytime skies, in counting up the minted gold of lifted buttercups and sniffing clover blossoms where the bronze bee sips. For you and I have dipped a bit in the tale of ancient lore, have gleaned a little of the wealth of learning's splendid store and, ah! how barren are the joys which sage and scholar prize beside the bliss of sun and song, the rapture of love's eyes!

Chocolate Jelly Cake.
Beat the yolks of six eggs with a cupful of sugar; add the grated rind and juice of half a lemon. Sift in half a cake of grated unsweetened chocolate, a teaspoonful of baking powder and a half salt-spoonful each of cloves and cinnamon. Sift in enough flour to make a thin batter, fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs and bake in layer cake pans. Lay up the cake with currant jelly and frost with chocolate frosting.

SO EASY!
Tintex "tinty" as you rinse

ONCE a woman begins to use Tintex, she realizes why millions of other women all over the country prefer Tintex.

For Tintex Tints are easiest to use—simply sprinkle in a basin of water (hot or cold) and "tint as you rinse." Realize, too, that Tintex gives you all the fashionable colors—the very shades that Paris has decreed as in vogue.

And an outstanding feature is Tintex in the Blue Box for tinting lace-trimmed silks without coloring the lace. Then there are Tintex Tints for tinting all materials. There are also fast, lustrous dyes for dyeing heavier materials. See the Tintex Color Card at your dealer!

Blue Box—for lace-trimmed silks (tint the silk—lace remains white). Gray Box—for tinting and dyeing all materials (silk, cotton, mixed goods). 15¢ a package at drug, dry goods and dept. stores

WINNING THE HONORS

By Angelo Patri.

Angelo Patri is just the principal of a New York grade school, but the late Charles W. Eliot, president of Harvard, said Patri is doing more for common-school education than any other person in America. This school, a model in every respect, is a mecca for teachers from all parts of the country.

PRIZES and medals are doubtless good gifts. In the first place, the child who wins one is usually a child gifted by nature along the line of work which the medal rewarded. He would have been quite as good if no medal had been offered. And the child whose parents pressed him to win had no chance from the beginning, but because he failed, feels inferior and a failure.

Competition in school work, individual against individual is not the best thing for the spirit of any child, winner or loser. The child who wins the competition is likely to be quite pleased with himself and ready to take on an air of superiority toward his mates. That does him no good. The child who fails is likely to say, "Oh, what's the use? I can't win a prize. I'm a dud. Or, I should worry. Let the ole lessons go hang. I don't care. I like to stay at the foot. Count from the other end and I win, too." Either state is bad for the child.

Why do parents push their children to win these competitions and medals? Why do they make children feel ashamed of themselves because they cannot compete against a big field and win? They, most of them, could not win a medal in any field themselves. Few of us excel in anything. Some of us excel in nothing at all, but we manage to live happily under the weight of mediocrity we carry.

Most of us found out long ago that we were not medal winners and decided to get our fun out of playing the game. Playing just for the fun of it. Doing the best we could, obeying the rules, making the most of each opportunity that showed, we enjoyed the sport. We've not let the children have the same point of view without having to pay such a bitter price as a feeling of inferiority entails? Why not teach them at the beginning that the game is the thing, not the medal?

Class honors are better than individual honors when prizes are considered. A healthy group spirit, a fine team spirit is better than the personal coveting, envious grudging of one child competing against the other for prize honors.

This is especially true in the elementary schools.

Here the children are scarcely formed as yet. Their tastes and talents are shaping and reshaping. They seem gifted in one direction today and a different one tomorrow. To offer medal honors to such children in a hot dish of competition is to expect that they will excel in this field and that hereafter he is expected to shine in it, whereas he may never do anything spectacular in it again as long as he lives.

School is a place where children learn and grow. The emphasis should be placed on the growth and let the learning be the influence that makes the growth. To work in these early years is like putting a period to his growth. It is given to understand he has arrived somewhere and the truth is that he has not yet started and would be at a loss to tell you where he was heading that very day.

The game is the thing and the fun of it. Not the reward.

THE WOMAN OF IT

By Marguerite Mooers Marshall

WOMEN ALONG, LITTLE BOYS, AND SELL YOUR PAPERS.

TO A WOMAN there is something about a newspaper that is so fascinatingly and so infinitely amusing and so infinitely earnest efforts to inform her dress—in the name of ethics, esthetics, cold business or what have you? He works so hard, and he gets nowhere for his pains.

He has dwelt, with auspicious favor, on the sin of the short skirt, ever since it began to shrink—undeterred by the fact that his predecessors for generations had sneered at the clumsy "street-cleaning" long skirt, and had made woe-begone jokes at the havoc the wind played with it. Woman, despite male preaching, kept right on wearing 'em long and lauded a new double offensive against such abbreviation. The textile manufacturers complain that it's bad for business. And a somewhat comes to the aid of the cause by asserting that "ninety per cent of all legs on exhibition are not worth looking at twice." (One theory on a careful findings are based on a careful statistical survey—"survey" would seem to be the word. One visualizes an editorial expert with horn-rimmed spectacles—or would it be a monocle?—providing about our purities, giving to each feminine liberation what is vulgarly known as "the once over," and then asking himself, a la Hermione, "Is this pair worth looking at twice—or is it not?" If the independent is a habit of this sort of thing, one knows what editorial offices will be first stormed by the year's graduates from schools of journalism.)

THE question remains whether the business of the woman's beauty will succeed, where reformers failed, in lowering woman's skirt. We doubt it. For it seems to us that women will consider the matter quite simply as none of men's business.

Women certainly will shed no tears about the alleged losses suffered by the textile men. What woman, in the first place, is conscious of paying less for the skirt that reaches to her knees than she used to pay for the skirt that swept the floor? What woman, in the second place, feels that she is not adequately compensated for any men who sell her anything to wear? She is cynically convinced that they all charge her all the traffic will bear.

And that if they lose a traffic in the direction—which she takes leave to doubt—they more than make up for it in every other. When a woman pays from $18 up for a dress consisting of three or four yards of tissue-like material, which cannot even be washed, she is in the mood to worry about any hardship she may be inflicting on the poor manufacturer of the goods.

As for the esthetic argument we see no reason why that should get anywhere, either. We used to think, when short skirts first really came in, that most feminine legs really were born to blush unseen. But in the years since the freedom of the knees became an accomplished fact, have not legs improved? Sculptors point out that the reason why the average human body is ugly is because it can hide its lack of symmetry under clothing. The fewer clothes, the better figures, as a direct result of human vanity, the sculptor says. Either the mechanism of vanity has been reshaping underpinnings, or familiarity breeds tolerance—in any case the legs now on view seem to men more decorative than they were three years ago.

BUT suppose that the editor of the Independent and a few other men do not share our conviction? Suppose—as the editor indignantly insists—"for our part we are in favor of legs. The blighting fact that woman is a two-legged animal has been amply demonstrated." Why should a woman remodel her costume nearer to the Editor's desire of a few such capricious critics? In heaven's name, why?

Most men seem satisfied with the skirt "as is." No perceptible number shun the society of the short-skirted female. If they are "conscious of legs" they give no evidence of the fact. And we guess they can stand it if women can. Women have to behold men's legs, when they wear bathing suits and golf knickerbockers; in fact, of a less necessary trouser leaves no doubt that man is a two-legged animal. Does any woman suggest that, because of her ennuet over the "biologic fact," men should therefore don togas?

Women studiously refrain from telling men what to wear. A case for the sheer idleness of much of masculine clothing could easily be made, but the only time we, for instance, ever try to make it when we are goaded to reply to men's incessant fault-finding about feminine dress. Generally speaking, in the matter of clothes criticism of the opposite sex, women set men an example of commendable restraint. You'd think men might learn to run along and sell their papers—do their own work without worrying about the fashion in skirts.

Doubtless this is too much to hope.

REMEMBER GIRLS? With a heart beat was amplified ten trillion times for the American Medical Association Convention, the sound thundered like the tread of a giant—or like the hero's heart, in the old-fashioned novel, when he asked Angelina if she could possibly consider being his—or like the heroine's heart, in real life, when she applies for his first job.

The Diary of a New Father

Sunday Night.

THIS afternoon I was sitting here putting wrinkles in my face wondering how much it will cost me to move our furniture from the apartment to our new bungalow next Saturday, and I have to stop and laugh mirthlessly when I say "our furniture" because that is only a figure of speech on account of us having so many blanks in our installment account books yet, and that was some- thing to worry about too, and I was thinking, there is a limit to how much a man can earn, why isn't there a limit to how much he can spend, darn it? and then all of a sudden I found my troubles on account of the baby speak- ing to me.

I am not bragging when I say I have the smartest baby in the world. I cannot help it if he is brighter than other babies. If I said he was the brightest baby in the world on account of me being his father, that would be bragging, but when I say I am the father of the smartest baby in the world I am just saying something that anybody would admit, because he was only 29 weeks old at 4 o'clock this morning, and you cannot talk when you are 29 weeks old unless you are smart.

He was on a blanket on the floor, and Joan was playing with him, and he was trying to crawl, like he has been doing for several weeks now, and he was laughing.

FROM the ancient red pagoda to the newest thrill device, "twit-a-whirl," Forest Park Highlands, the playground for all St. Louis, fairly radiates an atmos- phere of carnival spirit and merry making.

"Yes, I'm out here mighty near every night," says a man who has been riding the "twit-a-whirl" for some time. "Have you ever rode that new slide? It's just grand. Steeper'n the old one."

"No, I won't go on. I'm scared I might fall frontwards."

"Whadda mean frontwards? They ain't nothin' there to make you fall frontwards."

"Oh! Look. Let's ride that Fer- ris wheel."

"Watch Mabel and Peggy trying to make the fellow."

"You didn't all three light offen that one match didja? Well, it's gonna be TOO bad."

"And we had the most marvel- ous time. We was in the Love Nest and in the Barrel of Fun and down all the slides."

"You just sit with your back to the center of the wheel."

"What if it does make you dizzy? You gotta expect that."

"The nerve of these boys coming out here along slays me. They gotta a right to drag a date along."

"Yes, but just the same he looked kinda lonesome and I just kinda smiled."

"Believe me I sure got him 'told. I said how do you get that 'way trying to Ritz me?"

"When he said let's eat I said now you're speaking my language, so I took a hamburger on a hot dog an'—"

"So I told papa we'd just fix a nice lunch and take the children to the Highlands. There's nothing like a picnic once a year. Gets a body away from home, and I like to see the crowds."

"Hello! Haven't I seen you somewhere before?"

"There's that little finale hopper that was doin' so good. Now her foot hurts her."

"If you ask me, I say it's one of the swellest dance floors and li- ten to that orchestra. Plenty hot."

"And I told my boy friend don't get high hat with me, big boy. I can't help it if he said I looked like Clara Bow."

"So I said well you could 've talked all day and not said that."

"O-o-o-o-o-h! George, get me off of this thing."

"And when we started down that real steep slide I just thought it would be long now."

"I want keep quiet. I tell you I thought I was falling. Why didn't it hold me?"

"Bobby always acts up. First it's a balloon, then it's the merry go 'round. Look at 'um now."

"Let's watch Dot when she walks over one of those air holes."

"Isn't it lovely? All the lights an' everything. Just like Fairy- land."

"You young 'uns are gonna be the death of me. I'll whip you both good when I getcha home."

"An I just got panicky when I looked down. Let's go on again."

"Just like Jeanie said, when you step on them rollers you sure got to pick 'em up and put 'em down."

"Let's go giffy the swimmin' pool, lots of nifty numbers over there."

"Doncha just love it? Wouldn't you just love to LIVE at the High- lands?"

EXCESSIVE perspiration is a thing that every dainty woman tries to guard against, with every possible means at her disposal. Nothing is so distressing to women of discrimination as perspiration, with the attendant fear of odor that destroys the sweetness gained by careful attention to the body.

There are many deodorants on the market to help women in the fight against excessive perspiration and there are several home remedies that are most effective.

One of the most important of these home remedies is the use of baking soda and borax in the bath water. Not much is needed, possibly half a cupful of each to a good-sized tub of water is suffi- cient.

Soap and water cleans the skin, removing surface impurities, but soda and borax penetrate into the pores and act as a purifying agent. They also tend to soften water that has been made hard by chemicals used for purification. All city wa- ter has to be treated before it is used for drinking purposes, but this process turns soft water into hard water and hard water is not so beneficial for cleansing as soft water. For soft water allows the soap used to lather more freely and the full benefit of cleansing and purifying agents in the soap are derived.

Boric acid can be dusted under the arms and on the feet to help purify perspiration as it exudes from the pores.

Powdered alum is also good to stop perspiration for a time, al- though it is not advisable to use it constantly, as its action is highly astringent and no source of elimi- nation should be permanently closed. Two parts of boric acid and one part of powdered alum make a delightful perspiration powder and may be used more often than the plain alum.

Another remedy for excessive perspiration which is not gener- ally known but one that is most effective to eliminate the possi- bility of odor is the drinking of large quantities of fresh water. The drinking of water does not stop the perspiration itself, but it does prevent any odor. This is a partic-

The first rule, if keeping "That Schoolgirl Complexion" is your aim

By NORMA SHEARER

THE simple rules of nature are the ones to employ, if keeping a charming skin is your ambition. Do not gamble with your complexion on untried ways when Youth's rule is so simple, so economical.

Today beauty authorities urge a simple beauty treatment—soap and water for the face. But not just any soap, a true complexion soap—Palmolive. And regularly each night at bedtime as described.

Millions have kept schoolgirl com- plexions in this way. Their com- plexions are the despair of foreign beauties. This rule is their habit.

Wash the face gently with Palmolive. Massage its balmy olive and palm oil lather into the skin. Rinse with warm water; then with cold. If your skin is inclined to be naturally dry, apply a little good cold cream. That is all—it's nature's rule for keeping that schoolgirl complexion.

Use this way regularly, and particularly before bed. Note how much better your skin in one week. Use powder and make-up all you wish. But never leave them on over night.

GET REAL PALMOLIVE

Costs but 10c a cake. Use no other on your face. But be sure you get GENUINE Palmolive. Crude imitations, represented to be of olive and palm oils, are not the same as Palmolive. Remember that and TAKE CARE. The Palmolive-Peet Co., Chicago, U. S. A.

LAUGHING AROUND THE WORLD

with IRVIN S. COBB

No Ear Marks of the Tourist. MALL wonder it is that with the love our boys bear for the sea that here and there every once in a blue moon some chanter should be sung in the pale hours of midnight in foreign lands.

At any rate, several years ago there was a riot in the city of Colombo, Ceylon, which netted the cops or bobbies or what you will, of the English government a fair- ish assortment of seafaring men, who had been more or less hard hit through the proximity of ac- cessible liquor of a high alcoholic content.

Before the Magistrate, the fol- lowing day the prisoners appeared. Among them was a battered Yan- kee.

"The charge?" asked His Wor- ship from the meshes of the black robe.

"Assaulting with violence," re- plied the well-spoken native con- stable, a graduate of the British public schools. "Assaulting several passers-by, with intent to do bodily harm."

"What is your nationality?" the judge inquired of the Yankee.

"Boston, which is in America."

"Occupation?"

"Sailor, known from Portland to Key West."

"I don't believe you ever saw the sea."

"Listen, Judge, while I ask you a question: How do you finger I got over here—in a taxi?"

Cottage Cheese.

Take one pint of rich sour milk or cream, turn it into a flannel cheese bag and hang it where it can drain several hours. When dry, add to it a teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of sugar, and work into it a heaping tablespoon- ful of unsalted butter that has been warmed. When smooth add just a trifle of sweet cream and a spoonful of ground cinnamon, turn into a wet cup mold and place on ice. This is delicious for tea sand- wiches or to use with the salad course.

VIRGINIA TRACY

INSTALLMENT XXVII.

DULCIE FINDS SYMPATHY.

"I WANT you to realize, both you ladies, that I'm looking at this like a sensible woman. We've gone over every inch of it and our plans are all made."

The small speechmaker left refreshments largely to her guests, so eager was she to speak out her heart.

"This is what we're going to do about forming our own company. First of all, we've got to do without any backers, to pick on us or quit on us. The money we've saved's got to do everything. Our own company, our own pictures, our own stock, our own policy—we're going to own every bit of it. We're not going to be dictated to, not by exhibitors, even."

"So we're going to make very small, cheap, simple pictures. Smaller and better, Henry says—that's going to be our slogan. Pictures that'll be all photography, great photography—Benny's going with us, of course. And acting. And story. Henry says that where we've got it over all the others who have tried this and failed is that star and director and scenarist, all the biggest salaries are, just us—we'll only have to pay ourselves living expenses. And no regular overhead. We'll have to lay off between each picture till we're about ready to shoot, then run right out into the nearest field and pick whatever equipment's growing wild, as Henry says. Henry says sort of an alley cat of a company, sleeping in a strange studio every picture!"

"That way we've got money enough for four pictures. If we can't make the public sell us to the exhibitors with four pictures, smaller and better, it won't matter about our being in the cold, cold ground; that's where we'll belong. Because, look here, Mrs. Marsh and Miss Marsh, when our picture's finished, before we try for any bookings, we're going to hire a Broadway theater and show our stuff. And stand and fall by it."

"Yes, and if Broadway's so crowded an outsider can't get any theater, we'll show our picture on a sheet in Times Square at midnight! Get the verdict of the great crowded spaces, Henry says, show your picture! Take it or leave it, it's up to the folks!"

INDEPENDENCE PICTURES, SMALLER AND BETTER.

TAKE 'EM OR LEAVE 'EM!

O, anybody that's got one drop of feeling about pictures, won't that warm their hearts! 'Specially when our first story's going to be 'Heart of Fire'."

"Understand, Mrs. and Miss Marsh, even papa didn't realize what kind of a dust bin Hertzog's was going to turn out. When I got there, with nobody but him, with Dan and Henry three thousand miles away, I was about like a bird in a cat's mouth." Thus Dulcie's troubles, from their beginning, began to bubble forth. "But I thought there'd always be pictures. I'd never crawled onto a set in my life, not even when I'd been lying soaked on a raft four hours for a rescue scene, but I'd begin to feel myself come to. Because I'd never worked for anybody but Dan. Here it was like working for a megaphone. All the ideas the man had was to hawl down everybody else's. The picture just squashed rotten, and Hertzog's was glad enough to send for Dan. He left everything and came, the grand old darling! So then, except I was lying awake, all the nights through, crying for Henry, I thought everything would come out right."

"Specially when Dan said I was to put up the biggest kind of holler for them to send for Henry, too. Because as to waiting three more years, Dan said better not. By that time my face'd be all screwed up and nerve, maybe get that awful stiff, sick sweetness in love scenes, so I'd be no better than a strained mask to work with. About all he cares about, when you get to the bottom with Dan, is who he can work with and who he can't. And there never was anybody yet he could work with like me. So the day I was eighteen, when it'd be legal in this state, he was going to get me and Henry secretly married."

The romantic elderly ladies started slightly at these words of youth.

"Even if Hertzog's did get onto us, ever, why, by that time, Dan thought, my reputation'd be so immense I'd be perfectly invaluable, and Hertzog's couldn't afford to quarrel with me; they'd be too busy, he thought, taking in the money. Gee, but it turned out different!"

"You don't mean they spoiled your pictures on purpose?" "Mercy, Miss Marsh, no! They were most as crazy with disappointment as I was. They did every mortal thing I suggested, or anybody else suggested. Sent for Henry, for Benny, for Billy Westcott to play my leads—everybody connected with my old successes. They did everything. Except grow a few brains. See, in that book about history Henry's got, there's a picture of the flattest headed thing you ever saw—Nerthal Man, or something—and Hertzog's is about like that was to run around taking pictures. And you had to do what it said. Look, Miss Marsh, Hertzog's picture policy hasn't ever really got past the train running through the tunnel, and that's the truth. The first story Henry did for me here we found out what we were up against. You remember 'The Come-Back'?"

Cornelia nodded. "High Heaven! Henry called it. Well, it started by that starved out kid I played in it doing something pretty rotten so as to get a chance. Then the rest of the picture was the sure-fire old stuff, but done awfully funny and sad and sweet, about how she fought herself trying to make up for the rottenness, and crashed through all right in the end. Well, Hertzog's kept in every scrap of her remorse and her sacrifices and her trying to make amends for what she'd done. But what she'd done they took out. For fear she'd lose the sympathy. They would call it 'The Come-Back.' But they wouldn't start her out with anything to come back from."

"As if they said, 'Wouldn't it be better to keep the sympathy for Othello by not having him murder his wife?'" "Just exactly, Miss Marsh! Well, if that's what happens to your plot at Hertzog's, what happens to your star part? Dan said to me, 'Never mind, old kid! Your acting's there, better than ever. In your big scene you let a yell out of you that'll split every heart in the audience, even though you don't make a sound.' But he reckoned without their damn cuttings—yes, I must, too, excuse me, Mrs. Marsh, their damn cuttings! My scene, my own scene, my great scene—that scene they made Miss Goldman throw right out!"

By this outburst the nerves of seventy, from amid their pink and white roses, might well have been jarred. But not a bit of it! Mrs. Marsh was accustomed to the artistic temperament and to how it did go on. It was in perfectly sympathetic indignation that hostess and guests bristled down to the limousine together as Dulcie persisted. "You can see how much of our pictures we could ever get over! Mr. Hertzog used to come up to the projection room and cut out everything he thought was indecent. Then Lyman used to cut out everything decent. And the public saw the rest."

"It was 'Heart of Fire' really woke us up. We realized the minute we read it that it was our stuff. And then what we realized, as soon as we began talking about the way to do it, was that at Hertzog's we could never do it right. So Henry refused it, hoping to heaven nobody would take it before we got my contract broken. It was then we said: 'We got to form our own company!'"

"Maybe you think there's something money about my feelings, or I'd let the contract go to the dickens. And of course, if it was only the indemnity, Miss Marsh, Henry and me'd be an old married couple by now. A hundred thousand dollars—six months' salary—pshaw! But six months' salary when, besides that, you've got to stay off the screen for three years and can't make any salary at all—that is surely something else again! So we settled down to waiting for that secret marriage when I was eighteen, and for forming our own company till Hertzog's had lost so much money on me it'd be glad to let me go. Then along comes Lyman Hertzog and gets stuck on me.

"Well, then! Aside from never letting me go, probably, he was always nosing for why I couldn't stand him. Absolutely fatal if he got onto Henry and me! Lucky for us, the person he and everybody suspected was Dan. Henry's own mercy, Dan said the talk was, about him and me. And we certainly did whoop it up like a masquerade ball. Though Henry did act quite ungrateful, sometimes, about what we were making people think. And then, anyhow, though Lyman never got on to me about Henry, he did get on to Henry about me. And fired him. If I hadn't had Dan to keep my courage up I'd have hoped to die.

"Specially when papa begins cuddling up to the idea of Lyman."

RECIPES FROM "My Old Virginia Cook Book"

Confectionery Cake

TAKE 1½ cups of sugar, ½ cup of butter, ½ cup of sweet milk, 2½ cups of flour, 3 eggs, and 2 teaspoons of baking powder. Cream the butter and sugar together. Then add the well-beaten eggs and the milk. Then stir in the flour, baking powder and a little salt. Separate one-third of this mixture and add to it 1 teaspoonful of mixed ground spices, 2 tablespoonfuls of molasses, ½ cup of raisins. Put this mixture in one cake-layer pan and the other mixture (the light mixture) in two cake-layer pans. Bake the three layers. After baking put them together with any filling desired, placing the dark layer in the center. Cover with icing. (Copyright, 1937.)

Sheer black promises to be much in evidence during the spring and summer months.

Trousers for women, it is predicted, will sooner or later be universal. Whether or not this will be so is a moot point. Nevertheless, a group of afternoon and evening frocks, to say nothing of the sports mode, have trousers more than suggested in the skirt.

The tailor has reached a new mark. Generally of smartly cut black or gray, or possibly with black jacket and gray skirt, we find that one of the Paris couturiers is sponsoring a most distinguished model with gray coat and black skirt. This may be worn with or without the modish silver fox, and with a smart little hat of black or gray felt, or a combination of two colors.

HAVE hot nourishing breakfasts. Stop makeshift breakfasts simply to save time. Quick Quaker is faster than plain toast.

Hot, savory, nutritious; it's ready before the coffee.

Supplies the excellently "balanced" food ration of protein, carbohydrates and vitamins—besides the "bulk" to make laxatives less often needed—that doctors and authorities now so widely urge.

Start every day that way. Feel better, look better, be stronger and on your toes every minute. Ask your grocer for Quick Quaker—also Quaker Oats as you have always known them.

Habit

By Lucy Lowell

"I WAS VERY interested in your article on overcoming bad habits. I, too, believe that the way to overcome a bad habit is to replace it with another sort of action. But wouldn't this form a habit? "

"As I understand it, a habit is an action we repeat so many times that it becomes automatic and then we have to go on repeating it whether we wish to or not.

"Now it seems to me it would be better to watch ourselves so that we never would develop this senseless, automatic repetition of action. Perhaps we might do this if we could understand better just what causes habits. Are they caused by heredity or are they innate in us? Are they mental or physical? I would like your opinion on this.

"GRACE D."

To begin with, Grace, every action is merely physical reaction to thought. All material things as well as all deeds and words first were thoughts before they appeared as actions.

It stands to reason, therefore, that if the thought were to be controlled there could be no objectionable physical expression of mood or impulse.

Every physical habit is no more than an indication of a mental habit and the former is of vastly less importance than the latter. I do not believe that habit is inherited any more than I believe disease is inherited. There is a thing called the "Mendelian Recession"—a tendency on the part of children toward the characteristics of their parents and ancestors. But this is not something which must be weakly submitted to; it may be overcome by conscious effort. Not always easily, of course, but surely. Children are inclined to imitate parents and elders and this inclination gives rise to the fallacious belief in heredity. Each individual is apart from every other; no law is laid down which says because a parent has certain mental or physical characteristics the child must have them as well.

Your theory seems right to me, that the time to break a habit is before it fastens upon the character. As you say, a habit is largely senseless, automatic repetition of action.

But of course there are not many thoughtful enough to avoid forming habits. And our idea is to help the weaker ones to overcome habits already formed.

President Henry Miller and Executives Urge Aldermen to Defer $1,500,000 Appropriation.

ROADS WOULD BEAR ALL THAT EXPENSE

Aldermen Divided About Equally on Advisability of Voting the Appropriation at Once.

Representatives of the Terminal Railroad Association and of eight trunk line railroads yesterday asked the Board of Aldermen to name a committee of its members of engineers, to meet with the railroads in a series of discussions to learn what is necessary to make the Municipal Bridge useful to the roads and what the railroads would contribute toward making it useful. Pending the discussions, the roads asked the Aldermen to postpone action on the appropriation of $1,500,000 of public money to build a southern approach to the bridge.

Henry Miller, president of the Terminal, extended a formal invitation to the Aldermen for such a series of conferences. He said that the railroads were anxious to help the city out of the dilemma in which it has found itself ever since the bridge was built, were anxious to learn what the city wanted of the railroads with respect to the bridge. The railroads were ready, he said, to go to any reasonable length to meet the city's demands.

Now Aldermen Stand.

The bill appropriating $1,500,000 from bond issue funds for construction of the southern approach will reach a final vote in the Board of Aldermen Friday. Inquiries by reporters for the Post-Dispatch indicate that sentiment is divided about equally in the Board. Eleven members apparently are prepared to vote the money; 10 are ready to oppose the appropriation on the ground that it is hurried, particularly in view of the friendly offer of the railroads. Seven aldermen are regarded as doubtful, but a majority of the seven are inclined to consider the matter further.

President Neun, who as a member of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment voted for the bill last week, said at the conclusion of yesterday's hearing that he "didn't know" how he would vote in the final roll call. It was Neun who suggested the conference with the railroad executives and he is finding it difficult to refuse the railroad request for further conferences.

Anxious to Help Out the City.

President Miller of the Terminal declared there was no need for the city to spend $1,500,000 for any approach to the bridge. The railroads are ready to spend between $5,000,000 and $8,000,000 to build three approaches to the bridge, the minimum required to bring all the railroads entering the city onto the bridge, including the two small belt lines which want the southern approach.

"We are anxious to help the city out of the dilemma in which it has been ever since the bridge was built," Miller said. "There is nothing dark and mysterious about this thing. This damning of the Terminal is all moonshine. I am sure we can reach agreement in a short time. We can find a way out that will be of advantage to the city and the railroads. After all, their interests are one. And there is reason to believe that if the bridge is put to use and we continue to expend our facilities that costs will go down."

Delay Explained.

"Why," demanded Alderman Warden, "have you been silent all these years. Why didn't you tell me these things before?"

"This is because you never have invited us before," Miller replied. "This is the first time that the railroads ever have been asked by the Board of Aldermen to discuss the use of the bridge. For that reason, I think we are on the right track at last. Here we have the two authorities that have power to make any arrangement for use of the bridge. You are the legislative branch of the city government. You are the only ones with power to stipulate how the bridge shall be used. In the past, you have always been asked to consider some canned plan that has been brought to you. You have been denied first-hand knowledge. For that reason, I ask
